British Offer To Help Soviet Allies Is Reported

England and Russia

By the Associated Press.

London (Wednesday), May 17.—Informed sources said today Britain and France had decided to offer Soviet Russia a guarantee of support if she were forced to fight any aggressor from the west in fulfilling guarantees to small countries on her border.

The decision was reported to have been made after a two-hour meeting of the foreign affairs committee of the cabinet. It represented a concession to Russia's demands for reciprocal protection if she entered the British-led front.

It was understood from these reports that Britain planned first to ask an immediate joint declaration by France, Britain and Russia of determination to resist any aggression. Then the Soviets would be asked to guarantee all bordering states against aggression, including Poland, Rumania, Estonia, Latvia and Finland.

Army Staffs to Confer

If called on to fight as a result of these pledges, the Soviets would be joined by Britain and France.

Military staff talks to arrange each country's part in any war resulting from these pledges would be provided, it was reported.

Britain originally had proposed that Russia give pledges to Poland and Rumania similar to those given by Britain and France, with the proviso that Russia would not be obliged to fight except to support British and French forces after they already had taken the field.

Russia replied that without similar pacts for Latvia, Estonia and Finland, and an alliance of the three big powers the arrangement would lack the vital element of reciprocity. She feared being drawn into war without British and French support if other small countries on her border were not given guarantees.

Dutch, Belgians, Swiss

A note outlining Britain's concessions was expected to go to Moscow today, after approval by the full cabinet.

[The form of the reported British proposals followed closely a plan understood to have been favored by France, which has been seeking to compromise differences between the U. S. S. R. and Britain.

[The Post's special correspondent in London said it was possible the general declaration against aggression would also cover Western Europe—The Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland—as well as the states on Russia's western frontier.—Editor's note.]

The prompt reply to the Soviet note, received Monday, was decided upon after Moscow suddenly disappointed the British government yesterday by sending Ivan Maisky, her Ambassador to London, as her representative at the League of Nations meeting next week instead of

Suspect in Killing Of 2 Found Dead

Waterloo, Ill., May 16 (AP).—A 41-year-old man, hunted as the killer of a young woman and his rival for her affections, was found shot to death today in a locked automobile near here.

The man, identified as Gus Buettner, became the object of an intensive search by armed citizens and officers after the slaying Sunday night of Hattie Grosse, 20, who the sheriff said had refused to accept Buettner's attentions, and her companion, Willlis Wetzler, 25.

Berlin Orders Envoy Home From Turkey

Pope Reported in New Effort to Bring Danzig Compromise

By International News Service.

Vatican City, May 16.—Pope Pius XII was reported tonight to have submitted tangible proposals to Germany and Poland looking toward settlement of their Danzig dispute without recourse to war.

His Holiness also was understood to be prepared, if the appropriate occasion should present itself, to intercede in a like manner for peaceable solution of difficulties between Italy and France.

Acting as Counselor

Sources which reported the Pope's suggestions said he was acting as a "proposal-maker and counselor, not as an arbitrator." According to these reports, the Pontiff was said to have put forward a formula designed to satisfy both the Reich and Poland.

Nature of the Pope's plan, it was said, remains unknown. Reichsfuehrer Hitler has openly demanded return of Danzig to the Reich, while Polish Foreign Minister Beck, though acknowledging the predominantly German character of the Free City, has stood firmly for retention of Polish harbor and economic rights there.

"Extreme Interest" Indicated.

Diplomatic circles were inclined to think that if it is true the Pope has submitted fresh proposals to Berlin and Warsaw these might constitute a middle ground between the positions of Hitler and Beck on which each might possibly obtain advantages he deems essential.

The quarters which reported the Pope had made the suggestions said both Germany and Poland had indicated "extreme interest" and were "putting the proposals under tentative examination." It was said, however, that no replies have yet been received.

Von Papen to Report On Failure to Block Pact With Britain

By the United Press.

Berlin, May 16.—Germany tonight called home her Ambassador to Turkey, former Chancellor Franz von Papen, as Nazi anger increased against Turkey's adherence to the European "peace front" and decision to enter into a mutual aid pact with Great Britain.

A foreign office announcement said Von Papen, who was named Ambassador to Turkey less than a month ago, was returning to Berlin for several days "to report as well as for private reasons."

Rumors circulated in Berlin, although without confirmation, that Germany might suspend diplomatic relations with Turkey as a "reprisal" against Turkey's alignment with the Anglo-French front against aggression.

Retaliation Predicted

Informed Nazis predicted that Reichsfuehrer Hitler would take some sort of retaliatory action against Turkey and might extend this retaliation to other powers—particularly Poland—which have thrown in their lot with what Germans describe as Britain's "encirclement" policy.

When Von Papen was named Ambassador to Turkey on April 18, he was reported to have been instructed to prevent, at almost any cost, an Anglo-Turkish alliance which would close the fortified Dardanelles and the Black Sea entrance to the German-Italian fleets in event of war.

When he failed in this mission reports spread that he undoubtedly would be summoned back to Berlin to "report."

When he arrives in Berlin he will discuss the new Anglo-Turkish pact with Hitler and Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

Hitler Continues Inspection

(From Metz, on the French side of the frontier, came reports of a strong reinforcement of German troops along the Rhine in connection with Hitler's visit to the Siegfried fortifications. All along the Saar strip, it was said, German forces have been tripled during the past 48 hours.)

Berlin and Rome Sign Pact Monday

Berlin, May 16 (INS).—Germany and Italy today set Monday, May 22, as the date for the ceremonial signing of their new military treaty. German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop and Italian Foreign Minister Ciano will affix their signatures to the pact here.

Roosevelt Didn't Mean to Hint U. S. Bulls Are Ferdinands

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt in ordering Argentine canned corned beef for the Navy meant to cast no aspersions on the honor of the American cow or the valor of the American bull, but, he told his press conference yesterday, in Argentina the best cuts of beef are used for canning.

In the United States, he added, the best cuts are sold on the fresh meat market and other grades used for ground meat products. In the Argentine on the other hand, he said, there is not a sufficient market to absorb the supply of best cuts, a surplus exists and it goes into cans.

An order approved by the President for purchase of 48,000 pounds of the South American product has aroused a storm of controversy in Congress.

At a previous conference he had defended the purchase as involving both a cheaper price and better beef.

Earlier in the day, Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, laid before the Senate protests against the order by D. M. Hildebrand, of Seward, Nebr., president of the United States Livestock Association, and by Gov. Payne Ratner of Kansas.

Capper himself told the Senate he was "both surprised and shocked" at the President's statement.

Fires Light Royal Route To Quebec

Liner Docks This Morning; Safety Precautions Like Those for Somoza

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Quebec, May 16.—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth arrive tomorrow, positively. There was a seemingly infallible sign of it today. The thrifty and cautious French Canadians in the lower quarter, heretofore fearful of rain, put out their Union Jacks and their "Bienvenue Du Canada" signs, and thus made Quebec practically 100 per cent gay and festive.

There was one more rehearsal, regarded as the very last.

Fire Chief Rosaire Beaulieu had his men hose down the streets, a task they will perform again tomorrow so as to keep dust out of Their Majesties' eyes as they ride along in the royal procession.

Fires Light the River

Welcomed by bonfires along the shores of the St. Lawrence River, the liner Empress of Australia, bearing the British Sovereigns, their gentlemen-in-waiting, ladies-in-waiting, servants and some 400 trunks, anchored tonight in the St. Lawrence River off the Village of St. Jean, 18 miles below this city.

Tomorrow morning the Empress, with her escort of two British cruisers and two Canadian destroyers, will steam into Wolfe's Cove and the epochal tour of Canada and the United States will be on.

Quebec's population of 150,000 must have increased by a third tonight, with the prospect that thousands more will move into the ancient city early tomorrow.

Prime Minister to Go Aboard

The lobby of the Chateau Frontenac was jammed like that of a Washington hotel at Inauguration time. Red-faced Englishmen, a few of them wearing monocles, promenaded with bejeweled wives, their talk for once predominating over the customary French.

MacKenzie King, Canada's prime minister, arrived and met members of the press at a buffet supper. One of the young Canadian women gave him a curtsy, but it was not clear to Americans whether he rated it or whether the curtsy-maker was practicing.

The prime minister will be the first to greet the King and Queen on their arrival at Wolfes Cove at 10:25 a. m. He will go aboard the liner for this ceremony and will lead Their Majesties down the gangway to the terminal.

He will then present to the royal couple the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec and Mme. Patenaude, members of the Dominion Cabinet and their wives, the speaker of the Canadian Senate and the speaker of the Canadian House of Commons

Justice Cardozo Leaves $75,000 To Housekeeper

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 16.—Benjamin N. Cardozo, former associate justice of the Supreme Court, left a gross estate of $362,856 and a net estate of $329,509, according to a transfer tax appraisal filed today.

Justice Cardozo died on July 9, 1938.

His will left his residuary estate to Columbia University, from which he was graduated in 1882. According to the appraisal papers this amounted to $188,822 and is to be used "to found and maintain a chair of jurisprudence to be associated with my name."

Miss Kate A. Tracy, formerly of Washington, and now living in the Bronx, Justice Cardozo's housekeeper for 40 years, was bequeathed $75,000 "in grateful recognition of her devoted service during many years to my deceased sisters, Elizabeth and Ellen, and since their death, to me."

Navy's Newest Blimp Wrecked; 9 in Crew Escape

Lakehurst, N. J., May 16.—The United States Navy blimp K-2 cracked up today while landing at the Naval Air Station here after a training flight. The commander and crew of eight escaped injury.

The blimp, newest and largest in service, was approaching the ground when a wheel on the control car struck the land sharply and caused the helium-filled ship to careen into a tree on the edge of the field. The tree ripped the bag and the helium escaped.

Naval spokesmen said repairs would be made in Lakehurst.

'Flying Gas Tank' Overdue on Sea Hop

Aviator Unreported 23 Hours After Takeoff In 110 M. P. H. Plane Which Has No Radio; Course Called for 2,300-Mile Flight to Sweden

By the Canadian Press.

St. Johns, Newfoundland (Wednesday), May 17.—Charles Backman, 34-year-old Chicago painter and decorator, was unreported early today, 23 hours after taking off in his "flying gas tank" for his native Sweden.

He left Newfoundland Airport, 213 miles from here and near Botwood, at 5:10 a. m. yesterday (2:40 a. m. E. S. T.) in what his brothers said was a transatlantic delivery of the single-motored plane they asserted he had sold to a Swedish aviator.

BACKMAN

His 90-horsepower plane has a cruising speed of 110 miles an hour. He told airport attendants at Bangor, Me., he had charted a course of 2,300 miles, but the plane carried no radio to check weather reports or course.

His brothers said Backman had been unable to get Department of Commerce permission for the flight, and to obtain official sanction sold the plane to Gunnar Prossel, a friend in Sweden. The ship then was entered in Swedish registry and permission was obtained from Sweden.

He estimated a full load in extra gas tanks gave him seven additional flying hours after the Newfoundland-Stockholm distance was spanned.

His plane was equipped with a directional indicator, a periodic compass, cabin heater and usual standard equipment, but without some of the elaborate devices of some ships set to cross the Atlantic.

Flying Boat Lands

Lisbon, May 16 (AP).—The big French flying boat Lieutenant de Vaisseau Paris landed here on the River Tagus today, completing the first leg of an experimental flight from Biscarosse, near Bordeaux, France, to New York.

One more stop, at the Azores, is planned.

House Votes Extra Clerk for Each Member

In an atmosphere of hilarity the House yesterday decided to permit each Representative to employ an extra clerk at a possible increased cost to the Government of $657,000 a year. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Somewhat worried by the potential effect "back home," the members refused to permit a roll-call vote to be taken on the bill.

The measure raises the number of clerks each member may have from two to three, and increases the total "clerk hire" per Congressman from $5,000 to $6,500. It provides, however, that no individual salary of more than $3,900 shall be paid.

A bill to recompense Congressional clerks for traveling expenses between their homes and Washington was tabled in the Committee on Accounts, Chairman Warren, of North Carolina, told the House. Supporters of this bill said they would attempt to bring it out next session.

New Contract For Miners Affects 14,000

Troops Move Into County Joining Harlan; 'Shoot to Kill' Ordered

Harlan, Ky., May 16 (AP).—State troops extended across the Harlan County line into the edge of Bell County today as soft coal operators along the Kentucky-West Virginia line signed a union shop contract affecting 14,000 men.

Brig. Gen. Ellerbe Carter, commanding the National Guardsmen in the area, at his press conference late in the day said in answer to a question:

"The troops are under orders to shoot and shoot to kill when necessary.

"There'll be no pushing around of soldiers on this duty. None have been pushed around."

The general said he had an understanding with United Mine Workers' Union officials about picketing and that he believed the union "is sincere in their effort to prevent picketing disorders."

Gen. Carter said the troops sent into Bell County were with the consent of the sheriff.

Milk Price War Forecast In District

'Trade Barrier' Needed To Safeguard Public, Inquiry Is Told

By James D. Secrest.

A price war between producers of the Washington milkshed and Western dairy farmers was forecast yesterday by a spokesman for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association at the climax of a day in the House milk inquiry devoted entirely to Western demands that the National Capital market be opened to the Nation.

Donald Kane, attorney for the Maryland-Virginia association, made the implied threat during cross-examination of H. W. Gregory, chief of the dairy department of Purdue University.

He asserted that a breaking down of what the Westerners called "trade barriers" in the modification of District health regulations would force local producers to lower prices to meet the competition.

"Your farmers wouldn't get any more of the Washington business," he said, "and our producers would suffer from the cut in prices."

Consumers Would Suffer

The consumer, he charged, would suffer in getting a poorer grade of cream and milk as a result.

Other developments in the milk investigation were:

Chairman Bates, of the House subcommittee, offered a resolution asking for $1,500 additional funds to continue the inquiry.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal clashed for the second time when Seal charged that the subcommittee member was trying to "smother" his questions.

Representative Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin, assailed the "monopolistic practices" of producers in the East and stated that "there is no reason why milk could not be sold for 10 cents a quart, as it is in Milwaukee."

Spokesmen for the Indiana producers were introduced by Repre-

Townsend Blocks Fla. Pension Bill

Tallahassee, Fla., May 16 (U.P.).—The Florida Senate tonight defeated, 28-2, a proposal to give the State's aged $200 a month, after a telegram was read from Dr. Francis E. Townsend, head of the Old Age Pension Organization, declaring himself utterly opposed to it.

Co-eds at American U. Rout Whistling Thief From Bathtub

A bold youth who whistled nonchalantly in a third floor bathtub in the girl's dormitory at American University yesterday was captured through the brains and brawn of two physical education instructresses, two co-eds and two student editors.

LANGMACK

The captors were Miss Doris Snodgrass, head of the girls' physical education department, and Miss Clara Langmack, her assistant at American University on a scholarship after graduation from the Niels Buch physical culture school in Denmark.

The whistler's invasion landed him in a cell at the Eighth Precinct station, where Detective R. M. Kirby said he confessed to thefts amounting to $200 of jewelry taken from American University in the last two weeks.

Trim, athletic Miss Snodgrass first spotted her quarry as a fast-moving shadow which ducked into a bathroom as she emerged from her room. The invader, presumably to throw off pursuit, adopted a debonair attitude and whistled a gay tune from behind the door.

Idle Men and Idle Money

By Felix Cotten.

President Roosevelt yesterday called on the Monopoly Committee to attempt to solve the problem of how "stagnant pools" of idle money, now at the highest level in the Nation's history, could be used to put idle men to work.

In a letter to Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the committee, the President said the Government's task was "to find and energetically adopt those specific measures which will bring together idle men, machines and money."

The letter was sent as the committee opened hearings on a study made by the Securities and Exchange Commission of the problems of savings and investment.

New Proposals Indicated

Data presented indicated the hearings may set the stage for new Administration spending and pump-priming proposals, designed particularly to stimulate railroad equipment purchases, lagging housing construction, building of transcontinental toll highways and "public investment" in conservation of natural resources and public health.

The President, in his letter, emphasized the need for increasing the amount of wealth. Much of it, he said, can be created by private enterprise. But some, he declared, "can properly be created through quasi-public agencies" set up to do work which private enterprise could not perform.

This recalled the Administration goal of an $80,000,000,000 a year national income. Before the national income, now around $65,000,000,000, can be increased, ways must be found to divert "hoarded savings" into channels of productive enterprise, experts testifying before the committee agreed.

Small Business Stressed

Another point stressed by the President was the need for making money for capital investment available to small business also.

His letter, moreover, revealed that study is being given to possible utilization of the credit of municipalities to carry out desirable projects, thereby teaming up the Federal and local governments in a common objective. In recent years, local governments have been pulling in the opposite direction from the Federal Government, so far as spending in concerned.

Savings, unless put to productive use, are bad for the general welfare, however advantageous they may be for the individual. That was the undertone of statements made at the outset of the new series of hearing by Dr. Alvin H. Hansen, professor of political economy of Harvard University, and Dr. Lauchlin Currie, assistant director of the Federal Reserve Board division of research and statistics.

Dr. Currie belongs to the group of Administration liberals who

THE KING AND QUEEN AT SEA

(Their Majesties are discussing their American adventure, in an imaginary conversation faithfully reported by my staff eavesdroppers.)

KING: You'll be sure to be particularly nice to Senator Borah, dear?

QUEEN: Oh, goodie; will we get to meet Senator Borah? I hope he likes us.

KING: It isn't likely. And remember to make a fuss about the Sol Blooms; he's on foreign affairs.

* * * *

Queen Lizzie . . . rehearsal

QUEEN: And I'll tell Senator Reynolds to call me Lizzie . . . Did you bring your stamps to show the President?

KING: Yes, darling . . . Better go easy with Reynolds; my Ambassador reports that he's quite a ladies' man.

KING: That'll stop him. Don't forget to tell the columnists that you read their columns every day.

QUEEN: And you mustn't overlook the old ladies; they'll be very powerful in the next American regime.

KING: True, true; but we must maintain our royal indifference and have some fun.

"—a King must rehearse his role"

QUEEN: Yes, give 'em some of that Windsor charm. Remember, your mother always says you have just as much charm as Davey.

KING: Dear old mater; always trying to buck me up . . . Be sure and tell 'em how much you like Wally Windsor, how youthful she keeps Davey.

QUEEN: I wish I could starve myself as she does . . . I hope they don't ask you to make too many speeches.

* * * *

KING: Wonder what old Chamberlain would think if I got Roosevelt's name on the dotted line . . . Make him sit up, what? . . . Fat chance! . . . A king's hands are tied.

QUEEN: Now don't fret, Bertie . . . As your great-grandmother used to say, propinquity propinks; we'll do more good here than Neville did at Munich.

KING: My valet tells me I'm to wear 7 or 8 uniforms in four days . . . I hope they don't think I fancy that sort of thing.

* * *

QUEEN: I hope we can meet a great many of the younger people, the ones who will be governing America when you and I celebrate our Silver Jubilee.

KING: Perhaps we should have brought the children over. I think children make more friends than ambassadors—or kings, for that matter.

QUEEN: What are these three names written down here together—Vandenberg, Taft and Dewey?

"—if they could be nice to Borah"

KING: Oh—Kennedy told me. They're leaders of the loyal opposition or the conservatives, I think . . . They may come in at the next general elections.

QUEEN: Do I have to be nice to them, too?

QUEEN: These Americans change so often . . . Oh, dear, I hope they like us.

KING: They'll like you right enough, Liz . . . I wish I could do something kingly, like offering them Bermuda or Trinidad for naval bases.

QUEEN: Yes, it isn't easy to remember that we're just symbols.

* * *

KING: Gad, this sort of trip gives one an idea of what ambassadors must contend with. Fancy exchanging five words each with 1,300 people in one day.

QUEEN: Do you think there will be a wireless machine in our suite at the White House? I'd like to hear some of their programs.

KING: I say, Lizzie, wouldn't it be a lark to—er, what do they call it, take it on the lam or make our getaway from the White House on the q. t. and take tea at one of their cafeterias? . . . But we're wandering—what are we supposed to say when we meet Cactus Jack Garner?

Young Made Receiver for 2 More Banks

Frederick J. Young, receiver of four closed banks here, yesterday added two more to his list of wards when former Gov. Cary A. Hardee, of Florida, resigned from management of their affairs to return to Florida, where he has "two going banks that need me."

Young's new charges are the Federal American National Bank & Trust Co. and the Commercial National Bank.

A former newspaper reporter from Nashua, N. H., Young came here as secretary to Representative Edward H. Watson, of New Hampshire. In 1935 he was appointed to liquidate the International Exchange Bank.

PWA Revival Planned, House Leader Says

Predicts Return of Relief to States, WPA Curtailment

Abolition of the Federal theater, arts and writers projects and of WPA building construction was forecast to The Post yesterday by an influential member of the House appropriations sub-committee investigating the WPA.

Terming the present WPA administration "a rubber stamp for local demands," The Post's informant indicated that when the current WPA investigation is concluded, legislation may be enacted that will provide Federal grants-in-aid to the States for relief, with restrictions enabling the Federal Government to maintain strict supervision over State expenditures.

May Revive PWA

The Appropriations Committee may recommend $1,000,000,000 for WPA and $250,000,000 for a revived PWA, the member suggested. He said that testimony given before the WPA investigating committee had shown that WPA was best suited for road, sewer, playground construction and similar activities, while public buildings, he said, could best be erected under the private contract system of the PWA. He indicated that the committee had little sympathy for the theater, arts and writers projects, although he conceded that some of the PWA white-collar work should be retained.

Kuhne Apologizes

Eugene R. Kuhne, former employe of the Tennessee Fish and Game Commission, who appeared before the committee yesterday, expressed his apologies to Gov. Prentice Cooper and Marshall Priest, former State comptroller, for mentioning them in a list of persons who had allegedly benefited, through enhanced real estate, from WPA construction of lakes in Tennessee.

Pale, nervous, plainly worried, Kuhne told the committee that his affidavit linking WPA lakes to Tennessee politicians had been "misconstrued." He attacked Harry S. Barger, committee investigator who made public Kuhne's affidavit, for introducing "false and conflicting statements" into the record.

Kuhne, 27 years old, said he had told Barger that "I could not see how the WPA was to blame for anything that happened. I volunteered the opinion that the WPA had done an extremely creditable job in the United States."

Testimony on "Hearsay"

The witness said that his association of the name of Gov. Cooper with a WPA lake in Bedford County was made "entirely upon hearsay evidence," as was his allegation that Priest had been a beneficiary of another WPA lake.

Kuhne Blames Buntin

Kuhne transferred blame for advocating construction of some of the lakes to Howell Buntin, who, he said, was State director of game and fish until recently. He accused Buntin of attempting to ingratiate himself with important Tennesseeans by selecting lake sites near their property.

The request for a lake at Pressman's Home, Tenn., on land deeded to the State by the printing pressmen's union, of which former Senator George Berry is the head, "came from Pressman's Home," said Kuhne.

Shortly after Kuhne gave his testimony, Barger and another investigator departed for Tennessee to inquire further into Kuhne's allegations.

J. Lester White, chairman of the Louisiana State Planning Commission, asserted that WPA projects in Louisiana are being operated "efficiently and economically, are supervised by competent personnel, are providing outstanding benefits for the people as a whole, and compare most favorably with similar work done by private contractors."

Opposes Returning Relief

White pleaded with the committee to retain white-collar work, including theater, arts and writers projects. He opposed returning relief to the States or establishing a formula fixing a minimum sponsors' contribution.

Hampton Reynolds, chairman of the Development Planning Board of New Orleans, said "the record of WPA will stand up well under any fair comparison with private contractors."

Reynolds said return of relief to the States would be less efficient and more costly than the present system of Federal control.

The witness suggested the Federal Government establish "a kind of school to educate communities in what they can do under a properly-administered WPA program."

Senators Approve Wagner Bill to Expand Housing

The Senate Education and Labor Committee yesterday approved a bill by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, to expand the United States Housing Authority's program by authorizing an additional $845,000,000 in loans and contributions toward low-cost housing and slum-clearance projects.

The measure would allow the Housing Authority to enter into additional contracts for annual contributions of $45,000,000 and would boost by $800,000,000 its ability to raise funds for loans.

Chairman Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, of the special subcommittee which handled the bill, explained that it merely represents permission to borrow the money for loans, which would be repayable to the Housing Authority, and will not be included in the public debt.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, May 16.—The most popular exhibit at the New York World's Fair is the General Motors "futurama" depicting the geometric streets and highways of the world of tomorrow, according to a special survey conducted among World's Fair visitors by the American Institute of Public Opinion during the last week.

The second most popular attraction is the "city of tomorrow" exhibit within the 200-foot perisphere, showing immense skyscrapers surrounded by verdant parks and broad roadways.

The third most interesting exhibit, according to a cross-section of those who have seen the fair, is the telephone and telegraph exhibit where the spectators can listen in on telephone conversations between visitors to the fair and their friends back home.

Institute interviewers posted outside the World's Fair gates questioned throngs of visitors after they had left the fair grounds, asking them what had impressed them most and what they had disliked most about the fair. The interviewing was done during daylight hours, no test being made of the popularity of the entertainments at night.

The General Motors Exhibit far outranked all the others in popularity. With several large buildings not yet completed, the seven best-liked exhibits were named in the following order:

General Motors, Theme Center, A. T. & T. Exhibit, Ford Motor Co. Exhibit, Soviet Building, British Building, Railroad Exhibit.

Others receiving prominent mention included the Italian Exhibit, the General Electric Building, the Consolidated Edison Exhibit and the Glass Building.

Among dislikes the chief complaint was the "distance between buildings" which, according to those complaining, meant "sore feet from too much walking." The second complaint was "high prices for food and not enough eating places," and the third was the incompleteness of many of the buildings."

Miscellaneous comments included:

"They should have the beer and hot dog stands together."

"Some of the statues are a little immodest for children."

"They should provide customers with bicycles."

"My feet hurt me so much I can't think."

"No more fairs for me. I'd rather cook in a hot kitchen"—this from a Gold Star Mother, aged 75.

"The guards are so good-looking!"

"I didn't like the cows being milked by machines. It's inhuman."

"It's all like a wonderful dream."

Visitors were likewise asked how long they planned to be in New York visiting the fair. The average was seven days.

According to a Nation-wide survey conducted by the Institute several weeks ago, more than 33,000,000 people hope to visit the fair, many of them going out to the fair grounds two or three times.

British Poll Accurately Forecast By-Election

The British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute, added new laurels to its record of accuracy by forecasting the results of last week's by-election in Hallam with an error of less than 3 per cent.

The British institute, on the basis of a pre-election survey in the Hallam district, showed the government's candidate leading with 59 per cent, to 41 per cent for the opposition candidate. The government won the election by 61.7 per cent of the vote. The error in the prediction was thus 2.7 per cent.

The record of the British institute, whose reports are published in the London News Chronicle, includes correct prediction of five out of six elections, with an error of less than 2 per cent in four of them.

Roosevelt Seeks Delay in Tax Revision

Desires to Draft Own Plans Prior to 1940 Campaign, Friends Say

President Roosevelt has informed Democratic Congressional leaders that he wants revision of business-deterrent taxes deferred until the next session of Congress, shortly before the 1940 political campaign opens, White House intimates revealed yesterday.

This would give Mr. Roosevelt time in which to work out a tax revision plan of his own that he can lay before Congress and for which he would receive credit in event he seeks a third term in the White House, these informed persons said.

They cited the recent statement of Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, as "letting the cat out of the bag." Barkley said, after a recent White House conference, there would be no reason why Congress could not overhaul Federal taxes in an election year "if they were improved."

Campaign Intensified

This information was passed to the bloc led by Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, which is demanding revision of the business tax structure at this session, and only resulted in intensifying its campaign for early action.

As a result, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, who with Harrison conferred with President Roosevelt at the White House Monday, indicated to House Majority Leader Rayburn that sentiment was strong in the House Ways and Means Committee for elimination now of the undistributed profits tax and the substitution of a flat 18 per cent levy on all those earning more than $25,000 a year.

The present 12½ to 18 per cent tax on corporations earning up to $25,000 a year would be continued, under the tentative plan.

President Roosevelt plans to have another conference with Harrison, Doughton, Representative Jere Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the tax sub-committee; Secretary Morgenthau and Undersecretary John W. Hanes, in an effort to win them over to merely extending the expiring corporate taxes producing $1,300,000,000 a year, and some $750,000,000 in nuisance and excise levies, which lapse June 30.

Harrison Lines Up Committee

Harrison, however, has a majority of his Senate Finance Committee lined up to revise the business taxes, with a compromise four-point program. This includes dropping the profits levy for a flat 18 per cent corporate tax; allowing upward revaluation under the capital stock tax, carry-over of corporation losses for three years and elimination of the $2,000 annual loss limit for corporations.

Within the next few weeks the House must act in order to maintain the revenues from expiring nuisance levies, and the issue then will be brought to a showdown, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, lined up behind the Harrison plan and predicted its adoption by Congress.

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt denied there was any attempt by the Administration to "filibuster" the drive in Congress to modify business taxes.

Standing by Demands

He reiterated that he was standing by his demand that if the undistributed profits tax is dropped, ways and means must be found by Congress to force investors in closely held corporations to pay high individual surtaxes on profits retained in the corporations.

Mr. Roosevelt said he and the Congressional leaders had discussed between 15 and 20 proposals in a friendly fashion, but emphasized that he merely wanted the present taxes continued unless safeguards, similar to the undistributed profits tax, are found.

Asked whether he intended calling upon Congressional leaders for a definite program, Mr. Roosevelt shrugged his shoulders and said he did not have the faintest idea what would be discussed at the next conference.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he had given any consideration to new taxes to make up revenue which would be necessary to meet so-called parity payments in the agriculture supply bill pending in Congress. He replied negatively.

Patterson Resigns

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

RICHARD C. PATTERSON, Jr., yesterday tendered his resignation as Assistant Secretary of Commerce to President Roosevelt. It will be effective July 15. Patterson reportedly may join a motion picture firm. Administration circles understood that he would be succeeded by Edward J. Noble, who served briefly as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, unsuccessful in several attempts to oust Superintendent J. Ross Eakin, of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park, yesterday introduced a resolution proposing a Senatorial investigation into the official's record. Secretary Ickes, who has said Eakin "is doing a good job," has refused to remove him.

McKELLAR

McKellar's resolution stated Eakin had made an affidavit that he voted for President Roosevelt in 1936 in "order to curry favor" with the Interior Department. McKellar's resolution set out that D. Neal Adams, Clarence Corpening and J. Mayes, election officers, had made affidavits that Eakin's ballot was marked for Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee for President, "which, if true, shows that the said J. Ross Eakin falsified in such above quoted affidavit."

President Roosevelt yesterday renominated Oscar B. Ryder, of Virginia, to the United States Tariff Commission for a term expiring June 16, 1945. Already a member of the commission, Ryder's reappointment was expected to be acceptable to the Senate.

President Roosevelt's appointment of William M. Laiserson, chairman of the National Mediation Board, to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board, was approved by the Senate Labor Committee.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the committee, said the appointment was ordered favorably reported without opposition. No hearings were held.

Leiserson will replace Donald W. Smith, whose rulings have been sharply criticized by the American Federation of Labor as favoring its rival, the C. I. O.

A report circulated in usually well-informed Senate quarters yesterday that former Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin would refuse any Federal appointment offered him.

There have been rumors that he might be appointed to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Methodists Warned of Unwise Unions

Bishop Hughes Says Mergers Shouldn't Be Made in Haste

By Robert Tate Allan.

Back at his desk in the Methodist Building after the historic Unification Conference in Kansas City, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, one of the six prelates of the new Northeastern jurisdiction of the United Methodist Church, yesterday "strongly advised" against "hurried and unwise" mergers of local churches as a result of the union.

"Some local unions will become desirable and even necessary, but they should not be made in haste nor urged from purely economic considerations," he asserted.

Despite a cold, the Bishop, one of the three chairmen of the commission which drew up the plan of unification, contended that "the local churches should grow together rather than be forced together."

Mergers Not Required

He pointed out that the union places all local churches under one family, but does not require any local mergers, as "these are left entirely to the will, judgment and action of the memberships of the local churches involved."

Meanwhile, other local delegates returned from the conference emphatic in their praise of the unification and its significance for the future of Methodism.

Among these was Dr. John R. Edwards, pastor of Union Methodist Church, and elected delegate from the former Methodist Episcopal Church, who said:

"It seemed that delegates tried to outrival their fellow delegates in preventing anything that would indicate selfishness or a desire to promote the interests of one's own group."

"A Huge Success"

"The United Conference was a huge success from every standpoint," said Dr. E. C. Makosky, elected delegate and pastor of the former Methodist Protestant Church of Cherrydale.

Giving a laymen's point of view on the conclave, D. Stewart Patterson, promotion secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance, and who attended as a lay delegate, emphasized that, in the face of the discussions on church finances and such matters, the "spiritual note was never lost." He has served for four years as president of the Methodist Episcopal Laymen's Conference.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, who attended as a visitor, said that when he returned to his pulpit here last Sunday it was "with a distinct feeling that fences had been demolished, that century-old walls had been battered down by the forces of understanding, love and fellowship."

Praises Bishop's Address

More than 10,000 people were lifted by the "masterful address" of Bishop Hughes and the voices of 200 singers, said Dr. Raymond W. White, pastor of Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, another delegate, who characterized the climaxing "declaration of union" service as "one of those occasions when the emotions of the soul were beyond the expression of tongue or pen."

"It was very significant in the absence of any sectional interest," remarked Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University and delegate at large to the conference, where he served as chairman of the committee on courtesies. American Universjty is a Methodist institution.

Other delegates were Ernest F. Cherrington, of the Methodist Temperance Board; Henry Gilligan, of the former Methodist Protestant Church, and George H. Lamar, of Rockville. Several other local people attended as visitors.

Dr. Edgar C. Beery, presiding elder of the Baltimore Conference of the former Southern Methodist Church, an elected delegate to the conclave, said that he was impressed by the total absence of any "spirit of the individual church."

Colleagues Congratulate Georgetown's Father Walsh

200 Honor Father Walsh At Banquet

Georgetown Regent Hailed for Devoted Service to Country

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, founder and regent of the Georgetown University Foreign Service School, last night received the congratulations of 200 colleagues, alumni and students on a lifetime—in the words of Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts—"devoted to the service of country, church and God."

Senator Walsh, principal speaker at the banquet in the Mayflower Hotel, declared that "in all this country no man of Father Walsh's age has more frequently, ably and courageously pointed out the policies and principles which must guide this republic.

He likened Dr. Walsh to Senator Borah, of Idaho, in "his capacity to think through to basic truths, in his courage to speak the truth."

"In a confused world where destructive isms flourish overnight," the Senator said, "Father Walsh has rendered greater service than if he had held public office, for he has proclaimed fundamental principles, and men and women have stopped to listen."

Ambassador of Good Will

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown, in a reference to Dr. Walsh's frequent public criticism of the Soviet regime, speculated on the possibility that the educator might some day receive a message: "Come back to us. All is forgiven. Stalin."

"We hope that message never comes," Dr. O'Leary said, "because Georgetown needs Father Walsh."

Recalling Dr. Walsh's activities as a representative of the Vitican in Russia, Mesopotamia, Austria, Germany and other countries, the president described him as "an ambassador of good will who has crossed the Atlantic more times than Ambassadors Bullitt and Kennedy put together."

Dr. Walsh, in response to the evening's tribute, assured Dr. O'Leary that he does not expect "to return to Russia in my present garb." He has received suggestions that he undertake first-hand investigation of present conditions in the U. S. S. R., the educator said, "but I couldn't get any promise of a round-trip ticket."

School's Growth Rapid

Tracing progress of the foreign service school since 1919, "when we began absolutely penniless," he praised the loyalty of teachers and students "who set out on our great experiment in a spirit almost as venturesome as that of John Carroll himself, when he founded Georgetown 150 years ago."

From its beginning with an enrollment of 60 students, the school has grown so rapidly, Dr. Walsh said, that "I never arrive in a foreign port without being met by an old student whom I remember graduating or expelling."

John B. Brady, president of the newly formed Foreign Service School Alumni Club, presented Dr. Walsh a plaque at the conclusion of the Senator's speech.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Katharine Frost presents Jane Ellison in a piano recital Tuesday evening in the King-Smith Studio School. Program: Concerto No. 1 in C major (Beethoven), Concertine (Jean Francaix), Concerto in A minor (Grieg).

In her artist's diploma recital last evening at the King-Smith Studio School, Jane Ellison essayed and carried through with commendable ease the task of playing three concertos in succession: Beethoven's first work in that form, a concertine by Jean Francaix, and the melodious A minor concerto of Grieg. There were some hesitancies and slips in the Beethoven, induced probably by a natural nervousness and by the fact that her partner in practice, Virginia Skinner, was unable to appear because of illness. Marthe Poncy replaced her at the second piano on short notice, and it was inevitable that the teamwork should have some uncertainties.

It was another story in Miss Ellison's fluent performance, with the assistance of Cotten Skinner, of the piquant concertine by Jean Francaix, the contemporary French composer, who will be 37 years old next Tuesday. This music she had at her fingertips in technique and in the force of her memory in interpretation, and she played it as though she delighted in its unconventionalities.

Francaix is a thoroughly Gallic composer in the clarity of his ideas and the terseness of his phrasing. Veins of humor and irony traverse this concertine of his, enlivening it with wit. The prelude is a scintillant presto, and the slow movement offers the contrast of a lento of the simplest kind. The minuet opens with a saucy passage for the orchestra, suggesting anything but a stately dance in its aggressive rhythm, after which the solo piano enters mincingly with the minuet proper. The finale, in five-four time, is a tricky and brilliant tour de force for the soloist.

The Lovette Choral Club presents its twelfth annual spring concert Tuesday evening in the Mayflower Hotel Italian Garden, with Howard Mitchell, violoncellist, as guest soloist. Director, Eva Whitford Lovette; accompanist, Elsie L. Cranmer; club soloists, Carolyn Schulte, Francis Bass Wilson and Laura Wentzel.

Guests of the Lovette Choral Club filled the Italian Garden Room of the Mayflower Hotel last evening when that organization of women's voices gave its twelfth annual spring concert under the direction of Eva Whitford Lovette, president of the District Federation of Music Clubs. The enjoyable program consisted of ensemble numbers sung with the precision and tonal quality which bespeak both sedulous training and enjoyment of singing and a diversity of solos.

Opening with the "Salutation" of Samuel Richard Gaines, the program offered William Billings' "The Lord Is Risen Today," vocal arrangements of Chopin's "Raindrop" prelude and Grieg's "Elfin Dance," T. S. Lovette's "Heart of a Rose," Curran's "Bird Songs," Dorothy Radde Emery's "Winds to the Silent Morn (directed by the composer), Molly Carew's "Flight, and Richard Kountz cantata, "Dawn of Spring."

Howard Mitchell, first violoncellist of the National Symphony Orchestra, contributed two groups of pieces by Eccles, Mozart, Bach, Albeniz, Faure and Bartok, with Sol Sax as his accompanist. Carolyn Schulte, soprano, was heard in Handel's "O Had I Jubal's Lyre," Brahms' "Auf Dem Schiffe" and John Prindle Scott's "The Wind's in the South." Frances Bass Wilson, mezzo-soprano, chose "Les Filles de Cadix," by Delibes, for her solo appearance.

A. Conti-Berenguer presents Marta de la Torre, violinist, in a recital Tuesday in Pierce Hall. Accompanist, Edouard Hargrave. Program: "Symphonie Espagnole" (Lalo), "Scene de la Czardas" (Hubay), "Zigeunerweisen" (Sarasate), "Lotus Land" (Cyril Scott), "Danse Russe" (Stravinski), and transcriptions of music by Bach, Chopin, Rimski-Korsakov, Joaquin Nin, Sanchez de Fuentes and Ernesto Lecuona.

Marta de la Torre, Cuban violinist, drew an appreciative, if small, audience to Pierce Hall last evening. Because of previous peregrinations to other concert halls, I was able to hear only the latter half of her program, missing Lalo's "Symphonic Espagnole" and some other items. In that portion of the recital, however, there was evidence that she has advanced in smoothness of tone since her last appearance here two seasons ago.

The brio of her playing remains the same, for she has abundance of temperamental fire. In Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen" this excitement of interpretation was coupled with technical facility in the bravura passages. Especially interesting were her readings of Paul Kochanski's transcriptions of four Spanish songs by Joaquin Nin, the "Rosalinda" of Sanchez Fuentes, and Lecuona's "Lucumi."

Deputy Internal Revenue Chief Dies in Crash

Wife Severely Hurt In Auto-Bus Smashup; 30 Children Uninjured

John R. Kirk, 48, of 4437 Klingle street northwest, deputy commissioner of Internal Revenue, was killed last night and his wife, Mrs. Flora Kirk, suffered severe head injuries when their car crashed head-on into a school bus at Massachusetts avenue and Van Ness street northwest.

Kirk was the thirty-second traffic victim of the year.

The bus was carrying 30 visiting high school children from Lakewood, N. J., to Glen Echo. None of the occupants of the bus was injured.

Witnesses said the bus was moving "very slowly out Massachusetts avenue" when the gray sedan, driven by Mrs. Kirk started to cross the street in an effort to turn into Van Ness street.

The Kirks were thrown forward into the windshield by the impact.

Mrs. Kirk was removed to Georgetown Hospital, where physicians said she was suffering from shock, lacerations of the head, a possible leg fracture and "probable" internal injuries.

The bus was operated by Dan Murphy, 22, of Asbury Park, N. J. He was being held in $1,000 bond for appearance at the coroner's inquest to be held within the next few days.

A native of Owensborough, Ky., Kirk entered the Internal Revenue Service in 1914. He was successively agent in charge at Nashville, Louisville and Cleveland before coming to Washington in 1938 to be deputy commissioner in charge of the income tax unit.

Japanese Refuse to Quit Foreign Area

Kulangsu Council Britain for Aid Appeals to U. S.,

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, May 16.—Japanese authorities rejected today a demand by the municipal council of the International Settlement of Kulangsu Island, off Amoy, for withdrawal of Japanese who invaded the foreign area there Friday.

The council appealed to foreign powers concerned for aid.

Concern was shown in the dispatch of four British warships and the United States cruiser Marblehead to Amoy. The Marblehead was expected to arrive there tomorrow, joining the United States destroyer Bulmer.

The council, foreign governing body, had refused Japanese demands for major administrative jobs in the colony's government. Japanese had entered the area after declaring a Japanese naval commander was endangered by an incident in which a Chinese was fatally wounded near him.

A. M. A. Told Only 40,000 Lack Medical Care in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 16.—The idea that 40,000,000 economically submerged Americans are without medical care was challenged before the American Medical Association today.

A committee study of 43,000,000 Americans was presented with the written opinion the number actually in medical need is nearer 40,000 than 40,000,000.

This statement referred only to persons not at present cared for in some manner. The report estimated that perhaps 10,000,000 persons among the 43,000,000 are receiving, as needed, free medical care direct from doctors.

The report summarized the results of a survey of 747 counties in 37 States made by local physicians.

Senate Action Delayed

Action on the Wagner bill in the United States Senate proposing Federal subsidies for the indigent sick, was postponed until Wednesday. It was announced that representatives of organized medicine will go to Washington May 25 to give the Senate committee the views of the present meeting of the house of delegates of the A. M. A. on the act.

The resolution, proposing spending the Federal funds through already organized local hospitals and hospital agencies, was disposed of with the declaration that the A. M. A. board of trustees already has adopted similar suggestions.

The delegates voted against a resolution to let down the bars to colored physicians, and substituted for this recommendation a resolution pointing out that "readjustments" are already under way in Southern States.

The house voted against a proposal to seat one woman doctor among the 174 male delegates.

Mind Is Greatest Problem

Dr. Rock Sleyster, of Wauwatosa, Wis., new president of the A. M. A. and one of the Nation's leading brain authorities, told the association today that evidence is available that at least 10,000,000 of the 130,000,000 people in this country bear in their bodies the seeds which may occasionally result in a feeble-minded child.

In his presidential address, he said mental troubles are the Nation's greatest unsolved medical problem and that on any one day 1 per cent of the population is in mental hospitals. About 13,000,000 adults, or 10 per cent of the population, will at some time in their lives be more or less incapacitated by mental illness.

More significant to civilization than the mentally unsound minds, he said, is the increase in number of aged by medical lengthening of life.

He suggested that this prospect of living to be old, and at the same time of dropping efficiency, may explain the widespread surge after "security."

"When Congress first came to consider social security the President of the United States warned them against Charlatanism in the field of economics. That warning is as important today as it has ever been in the past.

"It is perhaps more important because of the increased complexity of the situation and because its long duration has apparently worn away the powers of resistance of many who did not at first succumb.

"But the medical profession, aware of the nature of the men and the moral fiber of men, must oppose increasingly those forces which tend to set vitality, destroy initiative and to break down individual character."

"How Great a Price?"

"These reflections lead to the inevitable conclusion that it is necessary to weigh carefully the extent to which the responsibility of the individual for his own care in times of old age, disease and unemployment is to be turned over to the Nation.

"In other words, how great a price are we prepared to pay for what is called security?

"If protection against the hazards of illness and of old age is to include an unwillingness to battle against economic forces . . . making the individual citizen ready to accept governmental gratuity on every conceivable occasion, again the price to be paid is far more than the goods are worth."

Compromise Program

Baltimore, May 16 (AP).—A threefold "compromise" program answering those who advocate socialized medicine was proposed before the Maryland Academy of Surgery and Medicine tonight by Dr. William Herbert Pearce, of Baltimore, who suggested:

State dispensaries for more widespread treatment of patients able to travel for treatments.

Roosevelt Record Is 1940 Platform, Farley Tells Tulsa

Tulsa, Okla., May 16 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley, introduced as a man "who some day might sit in the White House," told Democratic Party workers today the 1940 platform would be President Roosevelt's "splendid record in office."

A Gift Horse

Amarillo, Tex., May 16 (AP).—A $1,000 Arabian horse, wearing a $1,000 saddle, awaits Postmaster General Farley's arrival tomorrow. Publisher Gene Howe said the four-gaited steed is Farley's, a gift of plains region residents, provided only that the postmaster mount and dismount unaided.

Italy to Help Reich Get Colonies Back, Says Duce's Aide

Vienna, May 16 (AP).—Officials of the German Colonial Association were told today that Italy and Germany would co-operate closely when Germany opens a definite drive to recover her war-lost 1,000,000-square mile colonial empire.

"Italy will march at the side of Germany in the colonial question," Dr. Mario Mariegazzi, Premier Mussolini's cabinet director, told the convention of 25,000 Nazis advocating return of colonies Germany lost in the World War.

Solicitor General Of N.Y. Assails U.S. Tax Program

New York, May 16 (AP).—Henry Epstein, solicitor general of New York State, today accused the Roosevelt Administration generally, and the Treasury Department specifically, of having an "urge for omnipotence in taxation." He urged American cities to appropriate money to help fight any Federal tax on State and municipal bonds.

In an address prepared for the ninth annual conference of U. S. mayors, Epstein, a Democrat, asserted there was "the gravest doubt" that the Government could impose such a levy without a constitutional amendment.

Nevertheless, he added, Treasury Department advisers "insist on Congressional legislation as a prop to their views, in the hope that with such legislation and by harrying the public with the goblin fiction of tax exempts (securities) as a refuge of the wealthy, they can bend the Supreme Court to their will, irrespective of sound law or constitutional theory."

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew sour-gas stomach often pours out too much acid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the entire stomach fields harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Mental Cases In Hospitals Here Lead U. S.

More Than Any of 48 States in 1937; 602 Confined in 1938

This is eleventh in a series of articles on social and health conditions in the Capital. The twelfth will appear tomorrow.

By Eugene Pharo.

Six hundred and two Washingtonians were admitted to St. Elizabeths Hospital for mental disease in 1938, five less than the year before. In 1937 the District rate for population in mental hospitals was higher than in any of the 48 States.

An analysis of residence and race of the 602 was made public recently by the research department of the Washington Council of Social Agencies. Yesterday, Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths, added his interpretation.

The accompanying map shows that the majority of patients came from neighborhoods that have been shown by council studies to be high in disease, poverty, crime, and overcrowded, inadequate housing. But the latter conditions are considered not so much a cause of insanity as an explanation why mental patients are found there.

"It is quite possible," Dr. Overholser said, "that more mental patients are found in decidedly deteriorated slum areas, and in overcrowded surroundings, becasue those who are inadequate mentally as well as economically, drift there. In both respects they are persons who are not sufficiently adapted to their environment."

Economic insufficiency has another bearing on the statistics for 1938, he pointed out. Admissions have increased during the depression years because more families were unable to afford private care for those admitted. He also said that some patients at the hospital who were sufficiently recovered to return to the community could not do so because there were no jobs for them and no available support.

The map prepared by the council shows the residence of Washingtonians who were admitted to St. Elizabeths. It does not include 244 patients from outside the District, and 107 for whom no residence was given. Of the Washingtonians, 335 were white persons, 265 were Negroes, 1 was an American Indian, and 1 was Chinese.

Nor does the map provide an accurate picture of the total amount of insanity, even including all that resulted in hospitalization or other care. For example, in the areas of higher income some patients are privately cared for, and some are admitted to institutions outside the District limits.

While the percentage of population in St. Elizabeths is high in relation to District population, Dr. Overholser pointed out that New York and Massachusetts are not far behind. The rate was 350 per 100,000 population for the United States as a whole in 1937, and 582 for the District. New York and Massachusetts are more than 500.

On the whole, Dr. Overholser said, the incidence of insanity in the District of Columbia shows little difference from its occurrence in any other closely settled urban community. "Deviations from normal behavior are not so well tolerated where persons are living at close quarters and rubbing elbows with one another," he commented. "In many States they may have as much mental disease, but they do not do as much about it."

U. S. Will See A King Unlike George III

That's One Reason Visit Pleases British, Says Duff Cooper

By Alfred Duff Cooper.

Former British First Lord of Admiralty. By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

London, May 16.—I was recently asked by one of those profound students of world affairs who read only between the lines of newspapers and attach deep and hidden meanings to the most unpremeditated actions of the great, what was the political significance of the visit which our King and Queen are paying to the United States. I replied that in my opinion it had no particular political significance but was merely the natural and fortunate outcome of a series of events.

It was important that the King should visit Canada. Since the passing of the statute of Westminster the King is the sole link which holds together the British commonwealth of nations. This fact is not always fully appreciated even at home, and is seldom understood or believed in foreign countries. The government of Canada is in exactly the same position with regard to the King as the government of Great Britain. The Parliament that sits in Ottawa is as free and unfettered in all its actions as the Parliament that sits at Westminster.

The cabinet who meet in Downing street have no control whatever over any of the self-governing dominions, whose high commissioners are their ambassadors, and the British secretary of state for the dominions has functions analogous to those of the secretary of state for foreign affairs.

The King is, therefore, under a far greater obligation to visit his dominions than any of his predecessors, and it is to be hoped that in the long and happy reign which we all wish him each one of the dominions will enjoy the privilege of a royal visit.

Different from George III

Since, therefore, it was necessary for him to go to Canada it was very obviously desirable that he should extend his journey to the United States. For to visit the continent of North America without seeing anything of the United States would be indeed as though a man were to go to a performance of "Hamlet" only to withdraw from the auditorium whenever the Prince of Denmark was on the stage.

The people of Great Britain, reluctant as they were to be parted from the head of the state even temporarily in these anxious times, are glad for many reasons that the King and Queen should pay this visit to the New World. In the first place, they do not grudge a holiday to one whose responsibilities are never ending and whose term of office is a life sentence.

They are glad that the King should see America, and they are equally glad that America should see the King. We are very proud of Their Majesties, and we have no doubt whatever of the impression they will produce upon the open-minded, warm-hearted people of the United States. There is indeed in the minds of many Americans a deeply ingrained distrust of royalty, born of an ancient grudge handed down by tradition and nourished by doctrines that have been firmly held for a century and a half. But George VI is not George III, and we are anxious that America should see the difference.

Words of Shakespeare

On the other hand, we do not expect Americans to subscribe to the sentiments which Shakespeare put into the mouth of one of his worst monarchs:

"There's such divinity doth hedge a king.
That treason can but peep to what it would."

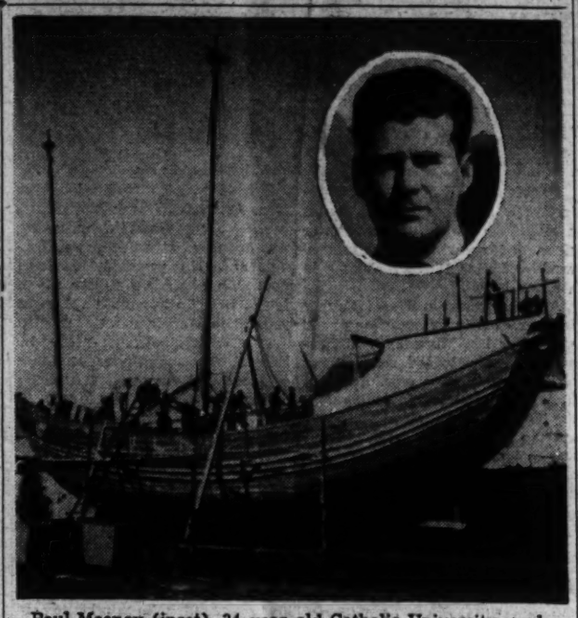
The Americans are unrepentant republicans. Their Constitution has served them well and they have had no reason to regret it. They will not be dazzled by the glamour of royalty. They will judge our King and Queen upon their merits. Confident of the verdict, that is all we demand.

Yet another feature of this auspicious visit is a thought of satisfaction to the people of Great Britain. The King will have an opportunity of getting to know the President. Heads of state have in the past been little but names—and not always even names—to the citizens of other nations. Even today the ordinary British man would hesitate to name the King or President of half a dozen foreign countries. But there is not one home in a million where the name of President Roosevelt is not a household word. The radio has brought him to countless firesides, and he is certainly the first President of the United States whose voice has been familiar to British men. In that voice they have heard expression given to sentiments which they recognized as their own, and they have rejoiced at the vision and courage which inspired the speaker. As they listened to him the waters of the broad Atlantic seemed to dwindle, and they understood that distance cannot divide nations who share a common faith. In such moments, who has not wished that all remaining causes of misunderstanding might be removed? Who has not thought how fine a gesture it would be if when the King says good by to the President he could leave with him an envelope which on being opened would be found to contain a check for the whole balance of that unhappy debt?

But such dreams belong to the realm of romance rather than to the world of realities. The real importance of the King's visit is the opportunity it provides, not for paying debts, making treaties or for spreading propaganda, but for the heads of two great peoples who have so much in common to shake hands with one another and have a talk.

District Adventurer Among Men Missing In Pacific on Halliburton's Chinese Junk

Radio Died After Last Message 52 Days Ago



Paul Mooney (inset), 34-year-old Catholic University graduate, is with Richard Halliburton aboard this motor-powered Chinese junk. The adventurers were last heard from on March 24, when the boat's radio failed 1,500 miles west of Midway Island

Fifty-two days that seem like weeks—Mrs. James Mooney has counted a year since her son last was heard from in mid-Pacific.

Paul Mooney, 34, Central High School and Catholic University alumnus, left Washington 15 years ago for a career of travel and writing. After collaborating with Richard Halliburton on his last four books, he joined him on his latest, and perhaps ill-fated adventure.

Driven before a typhoon in a Diesel-powered Chinese junk, Halliburton and his companions last were heard from March 24, when his radio died out 1,500 miles west of Midway Island.

Built for Oceanic Voyage

The heavy, spoon-shaped craft, built with high stern according to Chinese traditions, and decorated in rainbow colors with phoenix and other emblems of good luck, had been equipped with engine and deep keel for the transpacific voyage.

Only a week before the last message from the junk Mooney had sent his mother radio birthday greetings. "I'll write again from Midway and see you at the World's Fair," he had said in his last letter from Hong Kong, but now Mrs. Mooney has almost lost hope.

"I've been so distressed about my son I can't really think," she said yesterday. There were lines of worry on her cheeks as she talked to the reporter at her home, 2550 University place northwest. "Every one in the house has gone to the circus, but I'm too unhappy."

Exposed to Peril

A complete story of the trip to the departure from Hong Kong is contained in the letters she has received. The plight of Chinese refugees in Hong Kong, bitter criticism of Japanese, and an account of the junk's maiden voyage to Formosa and back when the crew nearly lost their lives in a storm, fill the letters.

"But I don't think they were going to write a book about the trip," she said. "The wharf is still waiting for them at the World's Fair in San Francisco, with a sign, 'Reserved for Richard Haliburton and his junk.'"

All hope is not abandoned for the 75-foot Sea Dragon ad its crew of 14, for Secretary of the Navy Swanson Monday night ordered the cruiser Astoria to begin searching the western Pacific. With four scout planes, the search will cover the area within a 750-mile radius of the craft's last position.

Wilcoxson to Speak

Leslie S. Wilcoxson, head of the Babcock & Wilcox Co. patent department, of New York City, will give an illustrated lecture on "Modern Steam Boiler Furnaces" at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the Commerce Department auditorium. The presentation is sponsored by the Patent Office.

Bloom Moves To Take Lead On Neutrality

'Trade at Own Risk' Bill Offered to Break Revision Deadlock

By Robert C. Albright.

Moving to break a Congressional deadlock on neutrality law revision, members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee determined yesterday to proceed in advance of the sharply divided Senate, if necessary, to attempt action on the controversial issue this session.

Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, said there is "absolutely no reason" for the House to wait on the Senate. He distributed a confidential print of a new bill to committee members and asked that it be used as a working basis for revision of the law.

The new bill permits only "trade at your own risk" with belligerents once the President has proclaimed a state of foreign war endangering lives of American citizens and threatening this country's peace. The present mandatory embargo on shipment of arms to warring nations would be repealed. Areas of combat operations would be marked off in wartime, in which it would be unlawful for American ships to move.

Invites Amendments

Bloom, who said he consulted State Department officials before drafting the bill, declared he had "no pride in authorship" and invited committee members to offer such amendments as they choose. He said he will call his committee together later this week to begin preparation of its own measure for which his bill would serve as a "start."

"My bill simply lays the foundation for a general neutrality law based on international law," he said. "It is a strict neutrality bill. But I will abide by the will of my committee. It is proceeding harmoniously.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee meantime was scheduled to meet this morning, but no neutrality action was slated. Other foreign affairs measures which have piled up during committee hearings on neutrality were to be considered.

The new House measure conforms in some "trade at your own risk" features to the bill recently introduced by Senator Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, who also said he consulted State Department attaches.

Accompanying the "confidential print" distributed to House members by Bloom were annotations describing the chief differences between the new measures and existing law. No change would be made in current restrictions on extensions of loans and credits to belligerents, or in provisions limiting travel on belligerent vessels. But arms embargo features would be omitted, and the law would not apply to foreign civil warfare. Another change would flatly exempt all American republics from application of the statute.

Recently expired "cash and carry" provisions would not be renewed.

The law would not go into effect automatically on outbreak of foreign conflict, but would be contingent on a Presidential finding that American lives and peace were jeopardized. This would avoid recognition of relatively minor conflicts not affecting this country.

Wants Hull to Testify

A section of the Senate Pittman bill and the House Hennings bill, prescribing "areas of combat operations," would be picked up intact. When the President proclaimed a state of foreign war, and found protection of American citizens required it, it would be illegal "for citizens of the United States or vessels flying the flag of the United States to proceed through any areas defined from time to time by the President to be areas of combat operations and so specified in his proclamation."

Bloom said the bill would enable the United States to maintain an officially "impartial" attitude toward foreign wars and "afford more protection than international law."

Bloom said he "still hoped" Secretary of State Hull may appear before the committee before action is completed. The committee has invited Hull to appear before it in closed session. Members of the Senate's mandatory neutrality bloc have objected to Hull testifying before the Senate committee except at hearings open to the public.

Thief Surprised In Co-ed's Bath

Miss Snodgrass, suspicious because of recent thefts in the dormitory, was not to be thrown off the track.

Hailing Miss Langmack, who was teaching in the gymnasium, Miss Snodgrass stationed her at the foot of the stairs and plunged into the bathroom. There she grabbed the man—a burly youth of more than 6 feet—and pulled him out of the bathtub. He was fully clothed.

The intruder broke loose, however, and ran downstairs, where Miss Langmack, reinforced by two co-eds, Margery Letz and Babette Leibman, and Students Irving Spalling and William McClure, brought him to bay. He submitted sullenly, without further resistance.

"He just wasn't smart enough," was Miss Langmack's verdict. She is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. H. C. Langmack, of 1407 Ingraham street northwest.

Held for investigation, the youth confessed to police that he also had taken jewelry from George Washington University dormitories and that he had pawned much of it, destroying the pawn slips. At his home police found more than $300 in stolen goods.

Roosevelt Urges Use of Idle Cash

have consistently favored a spending policy. Arguments in favor of spending advanced by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Reserve Board, have been based in some degree on his studies. In recent years he has wielded considerable influence within the Administration.

A distinct classroom atmosphere prevailed in the hearing room as Dr. Hansen recited figures from charts to bear out his theories as to what is happening in the economic structure.

Recalling that some experts had suggested Government spending as a solution of the problem of how to put savings to work, he said he could not agree with this or with the opposite suggestion that Government spending should be drastically curtailed in an effort to encourage business. The problem is not simple enough, he declared, to lend itself to any kind of "panacea."

"There should be no irresponsible spending," he warned. "There is a sensible middle course which we ought to be able to agree upon as reasonable."

Favors Tax Overhaul

Dr. Hansen favored a thorough overhauling of the tax structure, preferably a long-term tax plan worked out as a result of a comprehensive study. The existing structure, he said, is unduly repressive on consumption. In 1938, he said, $3,500,000,000, or 58 per cent of total Federal taxes, were siphoned out of consumption channels. This compared with 30 per cent in 1929. The trend of local taxes, he declared, also has been in this direction.

One essential step in readjustment of the tax structure, he emphasized, is adoption of the pay-as-you-go old-age pension plan proposed by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. The tax burden, he felt, should be shifted to some extent from levies directly affecting consumption to lowering of exemptions on individual incomes and increased income taxes in the middle salary brackets.

Dr. Hansen warned businessmen that many of the New Deal reforms are here to stay. Some of them, he said, were "long overdue." The problem, he declared, is to stabilize and consolidate reforms and to weed out "mistakes" wherever they have been made.

Aside from overhauling taxes and modifying the social security program, he declared, essentials in laying the groundwork for increased utilization of savings include "stable and responsible labor relations" and adjustment of prices to lower costs springing from technical improvements.

"We need, above all," he declared, "to find adequate outlets for our flow of savings into plant expansion and new construction if we are to avoid a depressed income level and chronic unemployment. To this end, we should encourage private plant expansion whenever and by whatever means it is possible to do so."

New municipal security issues, he pointed out, "have absorbed a considerable part of the flow of savings in England in recent years."

Dr. Hansen suggested the creation of a railroad equipment company, financed on a self-liquidating basis by Government funds, with authority to "purchase new railroad equipment and lease it to the railroads as and when needed."

"This might break the railroad financial log jam," he declared, "and open the way for an expansion of railroad capital expenditures."

Other proposals which he advanced for solving the problem of productive utilization of savings included fostering, partly by public funds, the development of new products and industries and reducing the guaranteed interest rate allowed in the Federal housing act to encourage residential construction. The rate, he declared, is "abnormally high."

Dr. Hansen revealed a new approach to the question of balancing the budget. Although Government spending and taxation should be so geared that they would even up in the course of the business cycle, the Government, he said, justifiably may go beyond this and "invest" money in self-liquidating or other projects with a definite public value.

Projects in the self-liquidating class, he declared, may include toll roads, tunnels, bridges, municipal express highways and boulevards through congested areas, rural electrification projects, rural rehabilitation and farm tenancy loans. The Bureau of Public Roads, he declared, has developed highway, tunnel and bridge projects which would cost several billion dollars to build.

Profitable governmental investments, he declared, may be made in conservation and development of energy and natural resources, as well as in "human resources," including hospitalization, public health, pollution abatement and sewerage projects, public education and public low-cost housing.

Although Peter R. Nehemkis, jr., special counsel to the SEC banking section, in introducing Dr. Hansen emphasized that the views of witnesses were their own, the suggestions advanced, it is believed, indicate the trend of thought among Administration economists as to what the Government must do to achieve the prosperity level which the President has set as his goal.

Dr. Hansen expressed belief that the "chronic unemployment problem" could be overcome only by "supplementing private investment with public investment on a considerable scale."

Text of Roosevelt Message

The text of President Roosevelt's letter to Senator O'Mahoney on the monopoly committee inquiry follows:

Dear Joe:

In my message to the Congress initiating the work of the temporary economic committee, I had occasion to say that "idle factories and idle workers profit no man." It may equally be said that idle dollars profit no man. The present phase of the hearings before the committee bear directly upon this problem.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the dollars which the American people save each year are not finding their way back into productive enterprise in sufficient volume to keep our economic machine turning over at the rate required to bring about full employment. We have mastered the technique of creating necessary credit; we have now to deal with the problem of assuring its full use.

In the series of hearings which the Securities and Exchange Commission is to hold before your committee, I take it that a major proble mof your committee will be to ascertain why a large part of our vast reservoir of money and savings have remained idle in stagnant pools.

Poses Two Questions

Is it because our economy is leaving an era of rapid expansion and entering an era of steadier growth, calling for relatively less investment in capital goods?

Is it because of lag, leak and friction in the operation of investment markets which pervert the normal flow of savings into nonproductive enterprise?

These are questions for your committee to answer.

I know of no more urgent ones in the country today.

The hearings before your committee, I hope, will assume the task of analyzing the financial machine in its relation to the creation of more needed wealth. We hope that the mechanism can be improved. Improvement can only be made on a basis of clear analysis. Having made that analysis, I hope that your committee will then be able to indicate ways by which the machine may be made to function more efficiently.

Urges Energetic Action

We have an immense amount of wealth which needs to be created in this country. Much of it can be created through private enterprise. Some of it can properly be created through quasi-public agencies. The problem is to use our added savings and increased credit to get this wealth moving, that is, to get it now in productive enterprises, and at the same time, to make savings available for use in all categories of private enterprise, as well as for the great and recognized enterprises which can command capital, but have less actual need of capital than many smaller but equally deserving enterprises. There is also the problem of determining how credit can best be made available for instrumentalities of local government and for those quasi-public enterprises which must do the work which cannot be done by private enterprise.

We have developed several methods of connecting money with men and materials so as to get useful work done. We shall need to use all of these opportunities, or, if you choose to put it differently, we must meet all of the demands made on our system, if we are to have lasting prosperity. It is our task to find and energetically adopt those specific measures which will bring together idle men, machines and money. In proportion as we succeed, we shall strengthen the structure of democratic economy.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are you won't have to look very far if you eat just the things most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean just a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is what you lack, your ticket is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the intestinal tonic, vitamin B,—and it's not a drug, not a medicine!

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

State Denies Blow on Head Killed Palmer

Fights Numerous At Picnic, Inquest Reveals; No Charge Made

By the Associated Press.

Sarasota, Fla., May 16.—Inquest testimony late today raised doubts a blow from the fist of Meat Cutter Kenneth Nosworthy fatally injured wealthy Potter D'Orsay Palmer in a picnic brawl.

After witnesses had said Palmer was persistently quarrelsome at the stag affair last Thursday, and Nosworthy acknowledged striking the oft-married Chicago heir, Assistant State Attorney W. M. Smiley told the jurors an autopsy had not borne out the report the playboy's death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage caused by a "terrific blow" on the head.

No Charges Preferred

Smiley said the autopsy had disclosed neither hemorrhage nor skull fracture and further expert medical examination would be necessary to determine the cause of Palmer's death in a Sarasota hospital yesterday.

The inquest was recessed indefinitely to permit this examination.

Before the inquest, Sheriff C. J. Hutches said he was convinced the 6-foot Chicagoan was the aggressor in any trouble with Nosworthy and he saw no reason to lodge charges or arrest the young Bradenton man.

Nosworthy testified Palmer was in a belligerent mood at the picnic and he had tried to avoid him. He said he told a policeman of difficulties with Palmer and was told to "forget it" and try to keep out of Palmer's way.

Later, Nosworthy said, Palmer sought him out and they shook hands, Palmer giving him a drink of liquor. He related that while the two were standing near each other, another member of the party approached him and said "You look like you want to fight too."

Nosworthy testified he exchanged a few blows with the man, whom he identified only as "Langford," and that Palmer then entered the fight.

Palmer, Nosworthy asserted, struck him in the stomach and then tackled him around the legs, biting his left leg. Nosworthy said he hit Palmer "a couple of times" to make him let go and that when Palmer stood up he swung a full blow at him.

He said he did not strike with his full weight and did not believe Palmer was injured by the blow.

Questioned further by Smiley, Nosworthy said he left "before the free-for-all began." He did not elaborate on the "free-for-all."

Divorce ended the first three marriages of Palmer and he recently was reconciled with his fourth wife, a former waitress, after she had sued him for separate maintenance.

Utility Paid Grey to Meet 'Right People'

Associated Gas Official Denies Capital Aide Was Hired as Lobbyist

By the Associated Press.

Ben Grey, who received $55,000 from Associated Gas & Electric Co. in 1937 for public relations work, was described at a Securities Commission hearing yesterday as a short man with a blonde mustache whose job it was "to mix with the right people" in Washington.

This description was given by Fred S. Burroughs, vice president of Associated Gas, who was called to the witness stand by Lewis M. Dabney, SEC counsel.

Dabney was sought in recent hearings to learn Grey's identity and his duties with the company. The SEC is conducting the hearings to determine whether the company's securities should be suspended or delisted from national exchanges. The commission alleges that the company filed "false and misleading" statements with relation to material facts.

Tax Lien Involved

Burroughs testified that he sought Grey's advice on methods of adjusting a Treasury tax lien outstanding against the company. He added that Grey was not commissioned to make any offers to anyone regarding adjustment of the lien.

"I did want him to mix with the right people," Burroughs said.

"Who did Grey tell you he mixed with?" Dabney asked.

"I knew he knew Mr. Oliphant quite well," the witness said. He did not identify "Mr. Oliphant." (The late Herman Oliphant was the Treasury's general counsel.)

Burroughs said he did not know what Grey said to various people with whom he talked. "He gave me his opinion on a method of approach," Burroughs said.

"His opinion was that nothing could be accomplished?" Dabney asked.

"Wide Acquaintance" Here

"No, he thought that, properly presented, it could be shown to the Treasury that it was to their advantage for us to refund," the witness said. He explained he was afraid money rates might go up and if the company could refund its indebtedness it might save two to three millions a year.

"I knew that two to three millions would thus be available for the protection of the Treasury's position." Burroughs said "the idea was that they (the Treasury) would lift the lien temporarily and then reassert it later but with less charges ahead of it."

Dabney asked Burroughs to tell him one problem Grey advised him on and what advice he gave him.

"I can't think of one," Burroughs answered.

"Would you say Grey was retained as—without using the term in an invidious sense—a lobbyist?"

"Certainly not. I gathered he had a wide acquaintance in Washington and that his advice was valuable."

Zionists Plan Army of Million For Palestine

Program of Voluntary Military Registration In Europe Announced

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 16.—A program of voluntary military registration of Jewish males in eastern Europe to provide a Jewish army which could be sent to Palestine when possible, was announced today by Vladimir Jabotinsky.

Jabotinsky is president of the New Zionist Organization, also known as the Zionist Revisionist Organization, which favored greater Jewish rights in Palestine.

At this moment, he asserted, European and American Jews could easily put an army of "at least 1,000,000 healthy young men" in Palestine to "defend the Jewish national home."

The planned registration would be "in compliance with existing laws in each country and would aim at creating a reserve of men who could be called to military service in Palestine when necessary."

Universal Parliament

Jabotinsky said the registration would be in conjunction with the summoning of an eastern European "parliament of Jewish misfortune," which is expected to meet in September at a place not yet determined.

The roposed parliament would be elected by univrsal suffrage and its program would be:

To demand an international conference of governments to settle the problem of Jewish immigration;

To work out a concrete plan of promoting Jewish mass settlement in Palestine; and

British Troops on Alert

Jerusalem, May 16 (AP).—British troops patrolled the Holy Land tonight to avert threatened disorders over the British government's Palestine plan, to be published tomorrow.

Wit hthe press printing reports of what the plan is believed to provide, both Jews and extremist Arabs expressed bitter opposition and planned demonstrations which included a 24-hour Jewish strike scheduled for Thursday.

(The plan is reported to provide for gradual creation of a Palestine state 60 per cent Arab and 40 per cent Jewish.

(Britain was reported to have decided to free herself in 1944 from any obligation to facilitate a Jewish national home in Palestine by further Jewish immigration.)

Michael Clark, 27, a British newspaperman, was killed today by shots from ambush on the Rehovoth-Tel Avid road.

Feeling Intense

Jewish revisionists sought to lower British flags from government buildings at Tel Aviv and signs were smeared on Jerusalem shop windows saying, "We are bringing illegal immigrants into the country, if necessary, under Jewish armed guards."

The Jewish Labor Federation, strongest body in Palestine, commanding 100,000 workers, pledged its support to central Jewish institutions to carry out any measures needed to defeat the British plan. All Jewish sports groups have their members "ready."

The Tel Aviv Municipality, which rules 150,000 in the all-Jewish city, planned to co-operate with the central body. Manifestoes signed by such groups as the "National Army Association" and "Fighters for Liberty and the Homeland" called on Jews to be ready for "any sacrifice."

"Swords" Threatened

A manifesto of the second group declared: "If the British government continues this policy of destroying the Jewish national home, we will unsheath our swords."

Bonfires Light Royalty to Quebec

and their wives; the Premier of the Province of Quebec, the Mayor of Quebec and Mme. Borne, and other officials.

A royal salute of 21 guns will be fired from the Citadel as the King and Queen come down the gangplank. A guard of honor and band will be mounted at the terminal and will be inspected by the King.

Then will come 12 or 13 hours of almost never-ending processions, visits and ceremonial, topped off by an official luncheon and a state dinner.

Precautions to guard the King and Queen probably never have been equaled in North America, although it must be admitted that President Roosevelt and Maj. Ernest W. Brown did pretty well for President Somoza, of Nicaragua.

Chief Constable Albert Canning, of Scotland Yard, is in charge. Working under him are hundreds of red-jacketed Royal Canadian Mounted Police, thousands of Quebec Provincial Police and unknown numbers of plainclothes men. Two Scotland Yard men are on the Empress with the royal couple. Once the royal party crosses the United States border, American Secret Service men and two State Department secret agents will board the train.

Placards inscribed with the initials of the Irish Republican Army caused a flurry of excitement here but officials insisted the signs were the work of pranksters and not of the terrorists blamed for the recent London bombings.

Crime has taken an amazing drop here in the last few days and it turns out that the suspected "crank" who was arrested the other day was a deranged individual whose feelings had been hurt.

He decorated his house, made elaborate arrangements, and then wrote a letter to the King inviting him for a visit. When no reply came from His Majesty, he wrote another letter saying that the monarch either had to stay at his home or couldn't stay anywhere in Quebec. The authorities didn't like that, so now monsieur will miss the royal visit altogether.

Other problems, however, still were bothering those in charge of Canada's welcoming program. Indians of the Caughnawaga Reservation near Montreal refused the position assigned to them in the parade route because space was reserved for only 100 braves.

Reconciliation was affected, however, when a Montreal resident offered the lawn of her estate for transformation into a model reservation with totem poles, campfires, tepees, squaws, papooses and Chief Poking Fire in full charge.

Former Secretary of Commerce Roper, it was learned today, will present his credentials as United States Minister to Canada to King George at Ottawa Friday. It will be the first time an envoy to Canada has been presented directly to the King rather than to the governor general, who is the King's representative.

The cables revealed today that just as the Empress of Australia and convoy entered Canadian waters yesterday the cruiser Southampton dropped a series of depth bombs to show the King the effectiveness of new and improved methods of fighting submarines. Although the Empress was more than a quarter-mile from the Southampton, repercussions shook the liner as if it had struck chunk ice.

Today the royal couple left their luncheon table to watch Pilot August Santerre come aboard at Father Point to guide the big liner up the St. Lawrence over the last 158 miles of the journey from Portsmouth, England.

Promotion of Rear Admiral G. F. B. Edward-Collins, commander of the British cruiser escort, to the rank of vice admiral was announced today. The cruiser Southampton fired a 21-gun salute to the King in recognition of the honor. Edward-Collins, who started his naval career 40 years ago, has been commander of the Second Cruiser Squadron of the British fleet since last year.

Tonight King George received Capt. A. R. Meikle, commander of the Empress, and conferred upon him the insignia of companion of the Royal Victorian Order for bringing the royal party safely across the stormy Atlantic. A number of members of the crew were presented by the King and Queen with personal gifts bearing the royal monogram in appreciation of their services on the eventful voyage.

The name of the Duke of Windsor, who abdicated for love of an American woman, keeps bobbing up in this teeming city. British Reported In Soviet Pledge her vice commissar of foreign affairs, Vladimir Potemkin.

Word that Maisky would be at Geneva meant, officials pointed out, that much of the importance of the meeting would be lost, but the British still saw one advantage in holding conversations there instead of in London. This was in the presence of French Foreign Minister Bonnet, who might help find a formula bringing me British and Russian plans closer together.

Foreign Secretary Halifax will fly to Paris Saturday to go over the situation with Bonnet and Premier Daladier beforehand.

Prime Minister Chamberlain is scheduled to make a statement Friday on the Moscow-London negotiations.

(Moscow diplomatic circles believed Anglo-Soviet agreement could be reached only by personal contact of Chamberlain or Halifax with Soviet leaders, and it was suggested as a possibility that Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff or his assistant, Potemkin, might visit London.)

Royal Visit Will Cost U. S. Under $15,000

State Department officials said last night the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to this country next month would cost the Government less than $15,000.

This estimate was at wide variance with a statement in the House yesterday by Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, who said it would cost $300,000 to entertain the King and Queen, "whose country owes the United States $5,000,000,000." He said his estimate was based in part on his own calculations of what it would cost for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps demonstration "and the cost of letting Government employes off to witness it."

State Department officials said the luncheon and dinner at the White House were not expected to cost large sums. The trip to Mount Vernon would be made on the Presidential yacht Potomac and the entertaining at the British Embassy would be at expense of the British government.

The special train on which the royal pair will come to Washington is a Canadian one which will be rented to the American Government at a reasonable figure, it was said.

U. S. to Install Secret Nitric Acid Process At Indianhead, Ending Imports for Powder

Plugging a vital gap in national defense, secret new equipment soon will be installed at the nearby Indianhead, Md., naval powder factory to make the United States independent of foreign sources for its powder.

Under funds voted yesterday by the Senate naval appropriations sub-committee, a secret chemical process developed by du Pont engineers will be installed at Indianhead to produce nitric acid from domestic materials. No longer, officials said, will the Army and Navy have to rely on imports of nitrates from Chile for the principal ingredient of explosives.

Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, chief of the Naval Bureau of Ordnance, declared the sub-committee action would assure "a sufficient war supply of one of the very vital things of national defense."

Other defense developments were:

The Navy revealed it was surveying the lower Potomac River with a view to re-establishing a torpedo testing range off Piney Point, Md., abandoned years ago.

Presdient Roosevelt said plans for building a new rigid airship authorized by the last Congress had been postponed indefinitely because of safety considerations. He revealed that when the Navy advertised some time ago for a dirigible one-third the size of the one authorized, a bidder said the larger craft would be safer. Since doubt has been cast on the 325-foot ship and a larger craft is not desired, the President said he told Secretary Swanson it would be better not to build any.

The Senate sub-committee on naval appropriations approved the $773,000,000 naval supply bill, with only minor changes. Report of the bill was deferred, however, pending action today on a proviso inserted by the House banning purchase of Argentine canned corned beef.

Secretary of War Woodring presented a modified plan to Congress for eliminating over-age Army officers, telling the House Military Affairs Committee that the presence of such officers on the Army active list constituted the "weakest link" in the American defense scheme.

Labor to Aid Defense

The House Naval Committee unanimously voted to table a Navy Department proposal for Government aid in building a graving dock in New York harbor capable to handling 45,000-ton battleships and ocean liners as large as the Queen Mary. Later in the day, Chairman Vinson of the committee introduced a bill to spend $2,545,000 for enlarging a dock at Boston.

Ralph Hetzel, C. I. O. employe director, said leaders of the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. have agreed on a program of co-operation in providing sufficient workmen for the armament program, but want a say in plans for recruiting for required men.

Officials of the United Automobile Workers Union and the Electrical Workers, Hetzel said, are preparing letters to President Roosevelt declaring they will assist in procuring trained mechanics for aircraft plants, but are opposed to training new workers until all unemployed skilled men have jobs and will not obtain men for antilabor employers.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee formally reported a bill to draft capital in time of war, declaring it is inconsistent to draft an army and then rely upon "voluntary subscription to support that army."

Admiral Furlong said it would require a year and a half to install the new nitric acid plant at Indianhead. Two years supply of Chilean sodium nitrate, all that is left of the huge stocks stored during the World War are now on hand. The plant will be able to produce 15 tons of nitric acid a year, the Admiral said.

"All nations during the World War considered they must have sea lanes open to Chilean sodium nitrates," he told The Post. "Cut off from these supplies, the Germans devised a method of taking nitrogen out of the air.

We felt it was of such great importance that we imported 100,000,000 pounds of nitrates from Chile and then spent millions in constructing a nitrogen fixation plant in accordance with the German method at Muscle Shoals.

French Method Better

"The process developed by the duPonts from a French method, however, is far superior."

With the duPont plant already in operation, the new Indianhead installation and an adequate process operated by the Hercules Powder Co., he said, all powder needs of the Army and Navy can be supplied from domestic materials.

In calling for immediate action on the War Department's plan to infuse younger blood in Army field grades, Secretary Woodring pointed to steps taken thus far to strengthen the Army and declared that "vitalization of our officer personnel" is the "next step in the program."

SEEING IS BELIEVING!

Now...circus folks, too, are comparing cigarettes this strikingly convincing way...

"JUST watch 'em burn," is the advice smart smokers are giving on cigarettes these days. At the right, aerial ace Everett White of the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey circus proves that one leading cigarette burns slower than other brands. The famous star of the high trapeze, Ed Rooney, observes that the winning brand is C-A-M-E-L! Camel's big advantage is in its costlier tobaccos, expertly blended in a cigarette made to burn slowly, completely!

Recently, a group of scientists made this interesting laboratory test on a bigger scale. 16 of the largest-selling cigarette brands were tested impartially. CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME FOR THE OTHER BRANDS. (Camels were remarkably consistent. Cigarettes of some brands smoked twice as fast as others right from the same pack.) IN THE SAME TEST, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME FOR ALL THE OTHER BRANDS.

Camel is the cigarette of costlier tobaccos...always slow-burning, cool, mild, with a delightful taste!

Everyone watches Everett White, the daring aerialist (center), intently, as Camels win in his cigarette test. He remarks: "Camel smokers know Camels smoke COOLER and MILDER. And any smoker can see one reason why! Look how much slower that Camel burns! And, say, notice how the Camel ash stays on!"

SMOKING IS BELIEVING!

Camel's slower burning (compared to the average time of the 15 other brands tested) gives you the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack! You economize while enjoying smoking pleasure at its best!

IF you feel that life owes you a little more fun, try a cigarette made with costlier tobaccos...a Camel! See how Camel's delightful fragrance and taste can brighten you up. Camels are amazingly mild. Cool ...easy on your throat...really a matchless blend.

Camels have more tobacco by weight than the average of the 15 other brands tested. Besides, Camels burn slower than any of those other brands. And by burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands, Camels give you the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack!

Camels give you even more for your money when you count in Camel's finer, more expensive tobaccos. Buy shrewdly! Buy Camels...America's first choice for a luxury smoke every smoker can afford!

The Judge Almost Gets Rich in New Hardy Film

Lewis Stone Bulwark of 'Hardys Ride High;' American Red Cross Makes a Single-Reeler; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

HAVING VIEWED practically all of the pictures released in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's popular "Hardy Family" series, this column is of the opinion that the most valuable asset these modest studies of American domestic life can boast is the extraordinarily fine study of a patient and understanding father contributed to the films by Lewis S. Stone, in the role of Judge Hardy. That view was strengthened yesterday at the preview of "The Hardys Ride High," latest of the series, scheduled to follow "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow.

BELL

To the Mickey Rooney fans, this, of course, will seem some sort of heresy. Master Rooney, to be sure, has surged to a high place among screen juveniles by virtue of his performances in the role of Andy Hardy, but he might, with great advantage to himself, take a few acting lessons from the paternal Mr. Stone, one of the distinguished veterans of both stage and screen. In "The Hardys Ride High," the youthful Rooney, to all intents and purposes, runs wild. It is not entirely to his credit.

One suspects that Master Rooney is "feeling his oats," as the saying goes. He overplays at every opportunity, and they exist throughout the length of the picture—which may be more the director's fault than his. He "mugs" all over the place. In "Out West With the Hardys," there seemed to be some evidence that Youngster Rooney had been brought under control. That hope was entirely dissipated in the unspooling at which we gazed yesterday afternoon. Mickey here is an entirely uncurbed young squirt, who exaggerates his part so seriously as to make it mildly ridiculous. The blame may not be wholly Mickey's. The part he is called upon to play in this one was horribly overwritten to begin with.

But there still is a deal of homely philosophy in "The Hardys Ride High." In almost acquiring possession of a fortune of $2,000,000, Judge Hardy and his wife and children are confronted with soaring hopes and abysmal disappointments that make possible a considerable period of helpful contemplation of the fundamental values of life. It seems, after all, that a great deal of money, coming suddenly to a family that never has had any to speak of, can do more harm than good. This seems a little hard to believe, but the picture makes it all seem convincingly logical.

And stabilizing this whole extravagant business is the characteristically fine portrayal of Judge Hardy by Lewis S. Stone and the intelligent contributory work of Fay Holden, in her accustomed role of his wife. There will be more about all this come Friday morning, the gods being willing.

About 25 or 30 years ago there was a highly lauded young actor from the West Coast, who made a deep impression on Washington theatergoers in the leading male role of a then new and mildly sensational play, bearing the title of "The Misleading Lady." He was a vigorous and vibrant young fellow, who had served his novitiate under the directorial tutelage of the late David Belasco. The story of "The Misleading Lady" was no more than a modernized rewrite of Master Will Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," but it gave a new young actor an unparalleled opportunity to "strut his stuff." That new young actor was Lewis S. Stone.

A one-reel motion picture, entitled "Footsteps," which portrays the training of the Red Cross nurse and the humanitarian work she performs, has just been completed by the American Red Cross. The purpose of this film is to acquaint the public with the nature and the scope of the activities of the Red Cross in behalf of mankind.

"Footsteps" opens with a sequence devoted to the training of the nurse. There follow footages devoted to virtually all of the pursuits to which she can dedicate herself after her training is completed. The various scenes in the film were photographed in a wide diversity of locales, ranging from the New York Hospital to the West Virginia mining regions.

"Footsteps" was produced by the William J. Ganz Co., of New York, with Milton Cross, famous radio personality, as narrator.

So the postman rings a couple of times, as is his habit, according to accepted fiction. The mail is largely foreign today, pretty postage cards making up an important part of it. For instance, from aboard the Normandie comes this from J. Raymond Bell, in charge of advertising and publicity for the Loew houses in this section, on his prize-award junket to Paris: "Hello, No Relation: Reporting that the Atlantic is now rougher than the reviews of 'Kidnapped.' Forty more hours and it's Paree in the spring. (Signed) RAY."

Then there is the other one that comes from Verdun, in France, where during the Great War it was decreed, "They shall not pass"—and they didn't. It says: "Here with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. Miss you very much. Love to you and our best girl friend. (Signed) ARTHUR AND HELEN DE TITTA."

Arthur De Titta, in case you had forgotten, was formerly in charge of Fox Movietone News in Washington, the post now held by our good friend, Tony Muto. Incidentally, the Earl of Allvine, who substituted for Tony, while he was on that protracted South American junket, has been assigned by Movietone News, to the King and Queen of England upon their landing in Canada. Nice work, if you can get it.

And not to be left out of the running—and there has been considerable sprinting on the part of the drama desks this week, believe it or not—the Warner Brothers are previewing Republic's major production of "Man of Conquest," this afternoon at 1:30, and next Monday will unwind "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" for the edification of the guys and gals of the press.

This "Man of Conquest," as everybody must know by now, is the picturized story of the life of Sam Houston, with Richard Dix in the title role. It is the picture which Jimmie Grainger, president of Republic, recently told me will either make or break his company. They "went to town" on this one to the tune of almost $1,000,000, which is a sizable batch of dough for any "independent," and hope for the best.

From all out-of-town reports and personal word from Jimmie, after the Houston, Tex., world premiere, "Man of Conquest" is making good all that was expected of it. I hope so; for Jimmie's sake and for the further prosperity of Sam and Jake Flax, who operate the Washington Branch Exchange of Republic and are two of the oldest veterans—in point of service, not actual years of life—in the local field.

Well, the die seems, more or less—mostly more—to have been cast. Instead of wobbling all over the week as he might have done, Manager Hardie Mealkin, of RKO-Keith's, has committed himself to a Thursday opening for "East Side of Heaven," starring Bing Crosby, with Joan Blondell and Mischa Auer. And on the same day, as already indicated, the Palace will break out "The Hardys Ride High." Two reviews Friday morning, instead of one. Order your copy of The Post early. (Advt.)

A bit of an innovation will be inaugurated tomorrow at the Mount Vernon open-air, automobile theater, on the Richmond highway below Alexandria, Va. Under the title of "Europe, May, 1939," the Mount Vernon will display a composite of several recent releases of "The March of Time," aggregating a full 80 minutes of running time. This pictorial mosaic will present the complete pattern of current affairs on the other side. It will deal with the refugee problem, the Mediterranean, the Maginot Line, concentration camp horrors and all the rest of it. Worth seeing.

By-Any-Other-Name Note.

The roses are putting on a few previews out Gallatin street way, too.

There Seems to Be Romance Here!

11 P. M.: "I'm going to broadcast on a sponsored program, five times a week, on a national hook-up," Elliott Roosevelt confides at the Stork Club. "Also the papers misinterpreted my last statement, about Army beef. I don't say anything against my father, or that the Army should use only Texas beef. I merely suggested raising the tariff on the importation of canned-beef" . . . "Mitzie Green," a producer informs at the Versailles, "thought she had laryngitis. But the doctors just discovered that she needs an operation to remove a growth on her vocal-cords" . . .

12 P. M.: "I came up from Washington with Henry Taft, brother of William Howard," a legalite declares at Moore's. "He said that his nephew, Charles Taft, doesn't want to be President." "The movies which were taken of the Solly Kreiger-Billy Corn fight," a sports executive reveals at Fan & Bill's, "will be used in 'Golden Boy'" . . . "Vera Brodsky, the pianist, played at the Fair, and a stagehand questioned her about Mozart," Mark Warnow relates at the Penthouse Club, "He bet Vera that he knew Mozart's birthday—and won his bet. 'It's amazing,' said Vera, 'that you, a stagehand, should know Mozart's birthday. That's wonderful' . . . 'Not so wonderful,' he replied. 'My birthday's the same day'" . . .

When the picture opens here next week, their quote will be advertised along with those of the film critics. "Maybe I'll give up my acting career," Sinclair Lewis teases at Sardi's, "and try my hand at this new business of writing novels. I think I can write one which wouldn't be worse than some of the current crop" . . . "Sammy Fain," a songwriter, informs at the Cotton Club, "will complete the music for George White's new 'Scandals'" . . .

4 A. M.: "Boston is trying to build blue-blooded Sister Frothingham as opposition to Brenda Frazier," Ben Bernie declares at the 18 . . . "I've offered her a job at the Ritz there." "Isn't it strange," an editor asks a Warner executive at the Havana-Madrid, "that no movie company as yet has screened 'The Life of George Washington?'" . . . "Well," is the reply, "that's because he didn't look like Paul Muni" . . . "My chauffeur just arrived with me, from England," Oscar Homolka, the British screen star, states at Reuben Bleu. "Five hours after he landed, he complained: 'I don't like the social life in America'" . . .*

5 A. M.: There must be some political reason behind the demotions of Detectives McGowan, MacFarland and Crimmins," a ringsider declares at Larue's. "The East Side and Park Avenue will miss them—their records have been so good" . . . "Our Ringling Circus will play Washington," John Ringling North reports at Claremont Inn. "Last year the President said he might come, so now we wrote and invited him: 'If you've had enough of the International Circus, have a good time at our's.'"

6 A. M.: ". . . and that fellow who gave you those two paragraphs seemed to be so nice, dear . . . What? . . . He's got a police-record? . . . Well, I don't care . . . As for as I'm concerned—ANYBODY who gives you two paragraphs for your column is a nice fellow."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, May 16.—Franchot Tone's "illness" was just a few days' rest or perhaps a checkup, for he lands in Hollywood Saturday. He returns to his alma mater, M-G-M, on a two picture deal and almost as soon as he reaches here starts work. He will roll up his sleeves, forget his past displeasure at Hollywood and begin his chores in "Thunder Afloat," the Ralph Wheelwright-Commander Haslip drama.

LOUELLA PARSONS

His acting partner, Wallace Beery, has already checked in with Producer J. Walter Ruben, and this movie will start in real earnest as soon as a girl is located. Both Jack Ruben and Director George Seitz wanted the bride, Barbara Stanwyck, but she is dated on other movie commitments. Don't think Monsieur Tone is giving up the theater. He has promised to be back in New York October 1 for a play, so M-G-M will have to work fast.

No better choice for Knute Rockne than Spency Tracy, who not only admired the great Notre Dame football coach, but knew him well as a personal friend. Sometime ago we heard that Pat O'Brien was out of the part because of other assignments, so getting Tracy is really a coup on Jack Warner's part. Of course, he is being loaned by M-G-M, where they undoubtedly consider turn about is fair play, since Edward G. Robinson is on their lot from Warners. Spence just got back in town, but not in time for the premiere of "Goodbye Mr. Chips" as he had hoped. Listen to him for five minutes and he sounds like a press agent for Robert Donat—and I say coming from Tracy that is praise from Caesar.

Joel McCrea and Samuel Goldwyn have parted company after four years together. Joel asked for his freedom, although his contract had a year and some months to run, because he felt that with Gary Cooper in the Goldwyn family his chances were limited, especially since Sam only makes four movies per year. Joel said that he and Sam parted amicably and he agreed to make "Career Man" at Warners, first, as planned for him. He has made very few Goldwyn pictures of late, having been loaned almost constantly to other studios. But Joel was excellent in "Union Pacific" and he feels that he would like to choose screen plays that give him the same opportunity.

Chatter in Hollywood: Leo Gorcey, accompanied by his two "Dead End" pals, Gabriel Dell and Huntz Hall, eloped to Yuma yesterday and married Ray Marvis. Miss Marvis' parents went along to see the "Dead Enders" didn't jump out of the plane, or make life too difficult for the bride and groom. One of the national magazines got wind of the elopment and asked permission to cover the story with pictures, but Leo, who isn't usually averse to publicity, said no and we like him better for not trying to make a three-ring circus out of his marriage.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Binnie Barnes turning all her charms on former football player Mike Frankovich at the La Maze. Talk is that he is really smitten with Mrs. Rhea Gable, but it's mostly on his side; Dorothy Lamour and John Howard aren't missing many days lunching together at the Paramount commissary; Maureen O'Sullivan and John Farrow expect the stork any moment now; Tom Brown and Natalie Draper are still consoling one another; Vic Orsatti, who, everyone believed, couldn't get Sonja Henie out of his mind, with Grace Poggi; Mickey Rooney in tuxedo, sipping lemonade with Lillian Long, a juvenile charmer; the Ben Goetzes said hail and farewell at a Troc party following the "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" preview. The Paul Munis, who seldom go anywhere, were there, as were the James Gagneys, Claudette Colbert, Eddie Mannix and Toni Lanier and Irving Berlin.

Clara Bow and Rex Bell, who have been living at their ranch for months, will be in town over the week-end; Charles Boyer's mother sails on the Ile de France for home, so Charles must think there is no danger of war. He always sends for her the moment there is any trouble; Nan Grey and her groom, Jack Westrope, will be reunited June 1; Harry Edington would like Margaret Sullavan to play "Sister Carrie;" Lucille Ball and Al Hall may tell it to the preacher in New York; Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who beat Tyrone Power to the altar by a day, sent him a wire and said "copycat;" Maxie Rosenbloom's date with the Alpha Gamma Sorority girls is Thursday luncheon. He accepted after they voted him the one man they didn't want to spend their lives with on a desert island, because he said he felt it was some kind of honor.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Tarzan's Mate to Live in New Film

Tarzan's mate will live!

At least, she will live until after the first preview of "Tarzan in Exile," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan, which introduced Tarzan, jr. in the person of Johnny Sheffield.

The story orginally provided for Maureen to die by means of a spear, thrown by a savage native. But, as a precaution, the final scenes were shot in two versions. So, when "Tarzan in Exile" is previewed a week or so hence, Maureen will be hale and hearty at the fadeout, although she still will come near death from the native's spear.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 16.—England, which has always boasted of its open-mindedness and free speech, in fact any nut can stand on a street corner and spout his beliefs (as long as he does not throw things) didn't quite live up to her tradition when they wouldn't allow the Duke of Windsor's voice to reach their delicate ears.

HOPPER

On the other hand, our Jimmy Roosevelt, Sam Goldwyn's ambassador for "Wuthering Heights," when asked to do a little job for the British Broadcasting Co., where no taint of commercialism is allowed, said he'd love to broadcast. But naturally, he'd have to talk about his job. And, by golly, he did!

When the old girls from the theater come to teach our younger ones what it's all about they should learn tolerance. Many headlines and heartaches resulted from Nazimova's coaching of Isa Miranda and Claudette Colbert. Alla had done it in the theater and knew how. But when she went back to Broadway, and did "The Mother" the public wasn't any more tolerant of her. It ran three nights.

When Eddie Cantor had to answer some embarrassing questions about "Ali Baba," he said: "How could I make a good picture, when I could say nothing but 'yes' to Mr. Zanuck?"

But think how much worse the picture might have been if he'd been allowed to say "no." And if Zanuck had said "no," we'd all have been spared.

Joan Bennett had quite a social swirl in New York, escorted as she was by Woody Donahue. But her public, in no uncertain terms, begged her to go blonde again. They didn't like that dark hair with two yellow streaks running through it. And while she was gone, her boy friend producer kept in training by wacking our latest "oomph" girl, who seems to be doing all right at the Wanger studio.

Orsen Welles, our most talked-of young actor, should have quite a bankroll but he put all that hard earned cash right back into the Mercury Theater. Just as Franchot Tone poured his into the Group.

Neither of them realized on their investment. Franchot is on his way back here where he'll pick up immediately. There's no tonic on earth like that enormous weekly salary check. Orsen Welles doesn't underestimate his value either. He's asking a quarter of a million per picture.

Geraldine Fitzgerald disembarked in New York with ex-President Hoover, who passed through the mob unnoticed. But what a welcome they gave her. You see, Willie Wyler had just left and told all who would listen that she was the greatest find among our newcomers. He named Bette Davis as the finest actress in Hollywood. And that after he'd finished directing Merle Oberon in "Wuthering Heights."

Comedians with the ability of Hugh Herbert are wise to get out of the groove and free lance. He wrapped up the picture, "Lady From Kentucky" and is now standing 'em in the aisles, on his personal appearances. And while we're handing out credits, let's give a big cheer for "The Man of Conquest" and keep your eye on Republic. They may be little today but there's always a tomorrow.

There's a line in "The Real Glory" that broke up Gary Cooper every time it was used, Brod Crawford is an orchid fancier and he presents one of his specimens to Andrea Leeds. Cooper is supposed to call it by its Latin name. But he muffed it each time he had to say it. After which Crawford has to mutter: "Excuse me, I've got to polinate." Which sent David Niven and Cooper into hysterics. They spent half a day trying to get it, before changing the line.

A 6-year-old miss won a part in "Intermezzo" which Willie Wyler directs with Leslie Howard because she admitted she lisped. Her mother told her that didn't matter, 'cause Howard stutters!

There's a green light instead of red on the stage door where Belle Watling and her girls are doing their stuff in "Gone With the Wind."

Rep. Norton Loses New Fight to Save Wage Amendment

Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the Labor Committee, yesterday lost a second fight in two days to salvage the controversial amendments to the wage-hour act, which are opposed by powerful farm and Southern blocs.

Quick objections from House Minority Leader Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Representative Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan, blocked her request for unanimous consent to return the measure to her committee for reconsideration and changes. Permission to return the bill to committee is needed because Mrs. Norton, facing almost certain defeat, withdrew her effort to force passage yesterday under suspension of the rules.

Jock McLean Seeks To Act for Father

John R. (Jock) McLean yesterday asked District Court to appoint him as committee here for his father, Edward B. McLean, who is a patient in a Maryland mental hospital. The son asked to be given the powers previously given Rear Admiral Mark H. Bristol, who died last week. Bristol was appointed to look after the $10,000,000 McLean estate in the District after he was given similar authority in Maryland by the court which sent the elder McLean to the hospital.

The Blackfriars Present "Cyrano de Bergerac" As Their Last Production of Current Season

Edmond Rostand's romantic drama, "Cyrano de Bergerac," was presented last night by the Blackfriars Guild at St. Paul's Auditorium for a run of three evenings.

Almost a classic is this 42-year-old drama, which captured the imagination of Europe and America when it was performed by Coquelin, Mansfield and Bernhardt. The robust and imaginative title role is widely known to more recent theatergoers through its magnificent playing, from one end of this continent to the other, by Walter Hampden. Since Mr. Hampden laid down the part—and for many years before he took it up in the exceptionally fine translation of Brian Hooker—no one has attempted to play the magnetic Cyrano. In other words, it was illustrious company the Blackfriars chose to walk with last evening and if they merely lacked lustre where others had once shone, it was because they attempted a sweeping and splendid vehicle that was beyond them.

While last night's audience may have enjoyed the play it saw, it was but a cut and shadowy relict of a great play.

Denis Connell, one of this city's most capable and effective amateur actors, was the soldier of the phenomenal owl's beak. Careful and workmanlike with his lines and business, Mr. Connell, nevertheless, lacked the fiery dash of the central figure. His all-important nose was neither so large nor so ugly as it should have been, for above all, Cyrano, Rostand tells us, was ugly.

One of the fundamental difficulties which the Blackfriars came up against in its ambitious project was purely physical. The stage of the auditorium is not ample enough for the play's demands, particularly of the first act, and the lighting effects are insufficient and monotonous for the variety of color the five scenes require. There were times, even in the brilliant first act, when the faces of the players were swathed in shadows.

The scene beneath Roxane's window for a time caught the spirit of the play with fine co-ordination between Mr. Connell and Charles Grumwell, as Christian, and Evelyn Mead, as Roxane. Its effect would have been further heightened by doing away with the off-stage music of Chaikovski, which again and again repeated the same theme from "Romeo and Juliet." It was superfluous matter, for in this scene the poetry of the words should be enough to convey the mood.

The large cast was directed by the Rev. Gilbert V. Hartke, with the assistance of Helen Johnson. S. Carlton Ayers was the Comte de Guiche and Richard Boulger the Ragueneau. Austin Gattis was a smooth-voiced Marquis in the first act and Jack Sherry doubled as Montfleury and one of the pastry cooks of the second. Margaret Frawley was the scheming duenna and Edna Evans also doubled as Theresa and Sister Marthe. Gertrude Heagney was Lise and the Mother Superior of the last act, in which Lorraine Jahn completed the convent's ladies. Jack Wilson, George Hayes, Francis McDevitt, William Leggate and Edward Baggs were others in the company.

Tax Revision

Ever since Congress reassembled last January there has been talk of tax revision to stimulate business and encourage employment. Over a four-and-a-half month period, however, this hopeful movement in the interests of recovery has come to nothing—nothing but talk.

The reason for this delay is obvious. There have been profound disagreements on the subject between the White House and congressional leaders. The advocates of tax revision had hoped to win the President over to their view, and action appears to have waited on that contingency. If Monday night's conference finally dispelled that hope, and convinced leaders in the Senate that they must act on their own initiative, it may prove a really constructive development.

Senator Harrison and his colleagues should recognize that they have been asking a good deal of the President. The undistributed profits tax was a brain-child which seemed to give Mr. Roosevelt a great deal of satisfaction. Against much criticism, he championed the idea of forcing business to expand its activities by taxing its undistributed earnings. It is natural that the President should be reluctant to advocate the final elimination of that statute.

In these circumstances Congress is called upon to take the lead in bringing about such tax relief as can be given private industry, without cutting the total amount of revenue collected. Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, is reported to have decided upon such action. It is unfortunate that he did not make the decision four months ago, for the chance of obtaining comprehensive revision of the tax structure was obviously better then.

Whether or not the House undertakes to relieve industry of unnecessary burden, it must pass a tax bill to prevent a lapse of temporary levies, with resulting loss of revenue. When that measure reaches the Senate it can be modified into a tax-revision bill embodying at least some of the Treasury's recommendations designed to aid a business revival. Considering the sentiment of the country, the House would probably accept such a bill, and it is scarcely conceivable that the President would veto it.

From every viewpoint, then, the tax-revision bloc in Congress should take the initiative in this matter.

Turkey Joins Britain

In one direction British efforts to build an antiaggression bloc have suffered a potentially serious setback during the past few weeks. In another direction, however, they have been crowned with considerable success.

The setback is the failure to iron out the differences that continue to bar the way to agreement between London and Moscow as potential partners in the nonaggression front. But the seriousness of the deadlock in Anglo-Russian negotiations is largely offset by the circumstance that Turkey has now joined forces with Great Britain.

Since 1920, relations between Turkey and the Soviet union have been extremely friendly, despite the differences in their political and economic systems. It is assumed, therefore, that the Ankara government would not have agreed to enter a defensive alliance with London unless it felt fairly sure that Russia will ultimately be found in the same camp.

At any rate, the Turkish alliance marks an important advance in British plans. Had Turkey decided to keep aloof, with Russia also sitting on the sidelines, the British guarantee to defend Rumania could have only a platonic meaning. Turkey's pledge of co-operation makes it possible for the western democracies to render some direct aid—via the Turkish-controlled Straits and the Black Sea. At the same time, it vouchsafes the Anglo-French bloc control of the vital passageway connecting the Black Sea and the Mediterranean.

Turkey's strategic importance was amply demonstrated during the World War when she threw in her lot with the Central Powers. That circumstance, Winston Churchill has testified, substantially prolonged the war. Had Turkey been on the side of the Allies the latter would have been able to turn the flank of Austria-Hungary much earlier. Realization of this, in Berlin, makes the current Anglo-Turkish agreement a potent force for peace.

What Price Milk?

Most Washingtonians will probably agree with Representative Bates that the milk investigation should continue. Useful information has been developed to date, but it is apparent that the committee does not yet have before it a complete picture of Washington's milk problem. The testimony thus far given has scarcely touched upon some important issues which the committee ought to consider.

It is essential, of course, to maintain adequate safeguards to insure a pure milk supply. No one would tolerate reversion to the old system under which unclean and sometimes contaminated milk was sold in the District. But it cannot be said that the milk problem is wholly solved by setting high sanitary standards and excluding "bootleg" supplies. Even more important, in some respects, is the provision of milk which the public in general, and not merely families in comfortable circumstances, can afford to buy.

Before the inquiry ends the public should be given full information as to the cost of producing and distributing milk for local consumption. One element in that cost is known to be the relatively high price paid to producers in this area, which in turn may be due, in some measure, to the rigid standards maintained by the Health Department. Even so, the estimated average price paid farmers supplying Washington dairies is only 6¼ cents a quart. What are the costs of processing and of distribution which run the retail price up to 14 cents?

In Chicago, according to testimony presented to the committee, milk is delivered at homes for 11 cents a quart and sold in stores for 9 cents. Is it possible that Chicago does not maintain adequate safeguards against impure milk? If its milk supply meets the standards of health, and farmers are fairly compensated, how have the costs of distribution been reduced? To a community like Washington, where many children do not obtain sufficient milk to give them a balanced diet, these questions are vitally important.

Fundamentally, it is not a question of whether the District's milk supply comes from Virginia or Maryland or Indiana or Wisconsin, or from all these and other States. The ideal arrangement would be a free market in the Nation's Capital for any properly supervised dairy that can compete with near-by producers. In practice that ideal may have to be modified to insure adequate inspection of farms sending milk here. But the underlying objective should always be to insure genuine competition in the milk industry. Otherwise there will be increasing demand for regulation of that industry as a public utility.

There is a good deal to be said for public regulation of milk prices, as well as of the conditions under which milk is produced. That step is not likely to be taken where genuine competition exists and the public can be convinced that the prices it pays are fair. But where reasonable prices connot be established in any other way, such regulation will and should receive support.

Tennis And War

The decision of the Japanese Lawn Tennis Association not to participate in this year's Davis Cup competition is indicative of the increasing extent to which all of Japan's energies are being absorbed in the prosecution of the war on China.

The present abnegation is intrinsically of less importance than the abandonment by Japan of the Tokyo Olympics, which were to be held in 1940 and for which considerable preparation had been made. Participation in the Davis Cup matches requires neither elaborate preparations, nor heavy expenditure, nor large personnel. Yet all this merely emphasizes that the action of the Japanese Lawn Tennis Association reflects a serious domestic strain.

Presumably because of the criticism which would otherwise be aroused, the Japanese tennis authorities do not dare to ask exemption from military service for a couple of star players. This psychology is a far cry from the attitude which prevailed in Japan when the effort to conquer China was begun, nearly two years ago.

Then it was a matter of swiftly punishing the recalcitrant Chinese for an "incident." Now it is a matter of concentrating every national effort for the prosecution of an unpopular, costly and increasingly dubious war.

Eternal Vigilance

Attorney General Murphy was on very firm ground when he told the United States Conference of Mayors, meeting in New York this week, that "the first battleground of civil liberties is the local communities." At a gathering held just across the Hudson from Jersey City this point did not have to be hammered home.

As a former mayor of Detroit, Mr. Murphy is well aware that, in times of tension, a clamor arises to deny freedom of assemblage and expression to those who, given the power, would take those and other liberties away from all. All too often local authorities submit to such pressures. But, as the Attorney General so aptly declares: "You begin to undermine democracy the moment you begin to draw the line and say that this or that person or group shall not have civil liberty. Draw the line against one group and it is an easy step to draw it against another and then another."

The fight to preserve democracy is a fight to keep unimpaired the guarantees of individual freedom embodied in the Bill of Rights. That fight cannot slacken without danger to American institutions and the American way of life. A grave responsibility thus rests on all constituted authorities, local, State and National, to avoid any action which tends to imperil these rights.

In addition, violations of constitutional liberties must be thoroughly exposed and vigorously prosecuted. To assist in this the Department of Justice recently established a new unit for the specific purpose of increasing the Federal Government's ability to protect civil rights. Complaints investigated by it, says the Attorney General, "indicate clearly that some public officials have used their power arbitrarily." Which is another way of saying that now, more than ever, the price of liberty is eternal vigilance.

Opposing Trends

It is interesting that the recent renewal of the provisional commercial agreement between Venezuela and the United States should have coincided with reports of a far-reaching barter arrangement between Bolivia and Germany.

These developments represent diametrically opposite trends. They also emphasize that the rivalry between the Hull policy of broad-based international trade and the totalitarian efforts to bind commerce in narrow channels, is a real issue in this hemisphere.

The Venezuelan-United States agreement provides for unconditional most-favored-nation treatment "in all that concerns customs duties and all accessory imposts." Like the reciprocal trade pacts, this provisional agreement opposes exclusive concessions. Indeed, the present agreement with Venezuela provides the necessary base for the reciprocal pact now being negotiated with that country.

On the other hand, the German-Bolivian negotiations would tend to force the trade of Bolivia to flow in a constricted manner. Harassed by the hangover of the Chaco war and by the fact that its principal export—tin—suffers from serious international competition, Bolivia has been forced to adopt desperate economic devices. The barter arrangement with Germany may, indeed, serve as a temporary means of disposing of surpluses in return for industrial products which Bolivia needs. But it will also tend to place her trade at the mercy of a single power and in the long run may, therefore, prove self-defeating.

That, however, is primarily Bolivia's concern. What concerns nations which believe in reducing rather than increasing trade barriers is that each country drawn into the vortex of totalitarian trade practices reduces by that much the area of free international commerce.

Waiting To Be Written

In her autobiography, published recently, Edna Ferber conceded that newspaper training is desirable for a career as a novelist. But she added that after a reporter has written the "Christmas story" for the third year in succession it is time to get out of the business. The remark is fairly indicative of the attitude of many toward the routine story which automatically appears year after year.

But just because of differences in times, and changes in the authors of these pieces, the Christmas stories continue to appear. And every once in a while, due to a mood, a viewpoint or a combination of circumstances, the incredible happens, and a great story is written.

The circus ranks high among those yearly events which usually evoke the most familiar adjectives from the reporters assigned to the occasion. They try, perhaps too hard, to remind older people of the days when they thrilled at the lions and tigers, and to awaken in the younger element the joy of anticipation.

But at a time when the average headline carries a somber note it is increasingly relieving to read that the circus is back in town. It may sadden some to think that it is a rejuvenated, streamlined circus, a circus which no longer parades through the streets. Still it is here, and that in itself is reassuring.

It is here, and fundamentally the same, though the audience may not be. Laughter comes and goes more quickly. Nervousness over the man who balances precariously on the tightrope is increased to a symbolic tenseness. Pleasure at the show is greater for the thoughts it may displace. And some no doubt wonder what will have happened by next spring, when the next circus makes it annual round.

Somewhere in all this a great story is waiting to be written.

The mystery deepens as to what has become of the 40,000,000 Jefferson nickels released by the Treasury Department in the past six months. They're not showing up in church collection plates, even.

The other day an experimenter tried out a lie-detector on a fisherman. Now he's trying to decide whether it will be easier to repair the machine or build a new one.

With so many nations at the crossroads, what the world needs most now is a good international traffic cop.

Near Tragedy

To the editor of The Post—Sir: I just wondered if you can do something about the following incident which almost cost the life of my 4-year-old daughter. My mother was taking my little daughter from nursery school and was getting ready to get out of the trolley car. It was one of those places (corner of R street and Wisconsin avenue) where there are no safety islands and where cars have to stop until passengers alight from the trolley car and reach the curb. My little daughter had just got down from the trolley car and was waiting for my mother to steer her across when a car zipped past, touching her dress, and vanished. My mother had no time to catch the number of the car, but the conductor of the Friendship Heights car saw it and was furious.

Since I know The Post is interested in traffic safety I wondered if a little publicity about this incident would be of use. I don't see what the police can do about it since we don't know the number of the car. But really, to almost lose my daughter, who has been carefully trained to cross with adults only and to watch out for cars, merely because some callous person won't stick to the rules, seems a bit thick.

The Circus

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the circus has come to town why can't we all forget wars, dictators and troubles with foreign countries? Don't forget to look around in the different neighborhoods of the city for some poor little boy or girl whose parents are not able to take them to the circus. Thousands of poor children have never seen a circus.

Tax Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hasn't the time arrived for Congress to awaken from its prolonged coma long enough to intelligently grapple with the tax problem with a view to checking a growing menace which has practically paralyzed American industry?

Our national business train has been stalled for a decade; incessant tinkering, at the expense of the taxpayer, has failed to produce desirable results. It is a foregone conclusion that a new and more experienced "crew" will shortly be given the job of getting the locomotive in shape to move ahead again. In the meanwhile, let us be sufficiently aroused to realize that a wreck of untold consequences appears inevitable, unless, indeed, constructive measures are immediately adopted to avoid it.

NYA Activities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your Sunday issue of May 7, The Washington Post presented nearly a page of photographs in the rotogravure section on the restoration by National Youth Administration boys of the historic Alexandria Academy in Alexandria, Va.

I wish to express my appreciation to you of this generous donation of space for the portrayal of NYA activities. Please permit me to congratulate you upon the policy of your paper to be fair and accurate, and to hope for your continued interest in our program when the actual news value justifies presentation.

Labor Court

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been requested to write this open letter for your paper by a distinguished physician and surgeon of Virginia.

For months this doctor has been saying to me on the street: "If ever the form of this Government is changed it will be because of labor. The Federation of Labor, under Gompers, started out to improve the condition of the workingman. So the laborer was maneuvered into the position of getting shorter hours and more pay, using strikes and threats of strikes to get that result.

"Now the labor unions have got this country by the throat. They hold the balance of power in politics and so long as this is so they can dictate who shall rule. As labor has grown in power, the farmers of this country have grown more and more helpless as to labor and as to the sale of their products. In this country labor is in the saddle and the farmer is coming more and more to be a peasant class."

Yesterday my doctor friend called me into his office and showed me his plan to alleviate these deplorable conditions.

Said he: "There should be a labor court equal in power and dignity to the United States Supreme Court, with judges appointed for life. It should be made illegal for labor to strike. In all controversies between labor and the industrialists, the matters at issue should be brought legally before this court. This court should decide what shall be done in each case, and the decision of the judges should be final. Any party to the controversy so decided by this supreme labor court who does not abide by the court's decision should be tried for a felony and punished by fines and imprisonment. Thus labor and the industries will be on an equal footing before the law, and labor disputes will be taken out of politics."

So said the doctor, and I set his words down here for what they are worth.

An American In London

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few years in London would give most Americans quite a lot of reasons why America should keep out of Europe's troubles. In fact, the short-view case for isolation is quite convincing. For our last intervention in Europe did not in the end do much good and the results disappointed everyone, though no one can tell how much worse they might have been both for the world and for us if we had stayed out.

Taking short views, however, in international affairs seldom pays. The nations whose foreign policy has been based on long views have usually scored finally at the expense of the shortsighted ones.

The time is coming when America will need take longer views than it has hitherto done. Germany ever since Frederick the Great has followed more or less continuously the same policy—expansion then consolidation; further expansion and again consolidation. The tiny state of Prussia has absorbed all Germany, much territory outside and now dominates Europe. It will not stop there; "Mein Kampf" tells us it must be a "world power or nothing," and Hitler did not invent the idea; it was even more talked about in 1909 than in 1939. The idea fantastic? No more fantastic than five years ago to have expected Germany to dominate Europe and reach from Hamburg to Hungary.

A good example of German farsightedness was the preparation by its great general staff of detailed plans for attacking the United States over 30 years ago. An up-to-date edition no doubt rests in the pigeonholes of that powerful body today, though there is very little chance of it being used. For it has more practicable ones. These involve South America, and if we are to forestall them we must think further ahead than we usually do.

The actions of the democracies here in the last 20 years, whatever their ideals may have been, are hardly such as to justify America's fighting for them. True, America had a share in the initial fiasco; equally true that Britain almost alone tried disarmament and honestly helped free Germany from Versailles. With all its mistakes, it has prevented a general European war. But that is no reason, nor is the danger of the democracies sufficient reason, to justify our intervention.

To justify this, not only American ideals, but vital American interests, must be affected. Unfortunately, they are. Let us try to picture what may, probably will, happen if Britain and France are downed by Germany, Italy and Japan. Australia will become Japanese; Germany and Japan will likely divide the Dutch East Indies, and Germany and Italy share out in Africa. This will give Italy and Germany their raw materials but not as much room for settlers as they need. This South America can do. Germany and its allies are not likely to attack the United States or Canada but would try to grasp Brazil and fight for it. Would we fight? If not, the Monroe Doctrine is dead. Even so, we are so nearly self-contained we could carry on and get our imports, even if only on sufferance. But I don't see America doing that. Wouldn't it pay better to help oppose the dictators now than wait till we have to do it singlehanded? This consideration and only this does, it seems to me, justify dropping isolation.

On The March

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because any sharp distinction between the terms "war" and "peace" lies entirely in the minds of democratic, and not fascist, leaders, all of us who prize clear thinking must realize the grimness of the struggle now on between fascism and democracy. The struggle must be grim, indeed, when one side regards peace only as a phase of war.

Of course, Hitler and Mussolini believe in all the peace they can obtain. Like other robbers, they, too, prefer to rob in peace! They have no objection whatever to our believing it is possible for democratic and fascist states to live amicably in the same world. What they object to is our waking up before it is too late!

No, we can think no longer in terms of "peace" or "war" or even "isolation," but instead only in terms of powerful world forces come to grips. Mussolini gave us the cue for plenty of hard, clear thinking when he defined fascism as "a nation on the march." Fascism will march on and on and on, until democracy's instinct for self-preservation calls a downright halt—which may, or may not, be too late.

The Post Impressionist

Patriarch Of The Mountains

JOHN MUIR, whose cententary has recently been observed, was incontestably one of America's greatest naturalists and one of its most beloved personalities. Unlike those two indigenes, H. D. Thoreau and John Burroughs, all North America was Muir's home. His name is revered wherever the things he loved are revered—the mountains, the wilderness, the trees and the wild creatures of the earth—but one must go to the West Coast of our country to observe this reverence at its most meaningful.

Primarily, John Muir's name is inseparably linked with the Yosemite. Between the time of his first visit there in 1868 and his death in 1914—a span of nearly half a century—Yosemite was his great love. He devoted himself to its exploration and later to the campaign for its establishment as a national park. When the Yosemite National Park bill passed Congress in 1890, Muir at once began work toward the goal of bringing about the recession of the Yosemite Valley to the Federal Government from State control, and it was so ceded in 1906. In 1903 Muir guided another great naturalist, President Theodore Roosevelt, through Yosemite, and what a trip that must have been! In 1912 Muir's book, "Yosemite," was published.

Through his relentless efforts for conservation Muir became known as the father of the national parks, and it is sickening to think what otherwise might have happened to some of the great wilderness areas, the redwood forests and the natural marvels that now remain inviolate within the borders of our Western national parks. It is no wonder that Westerners remember John Muir in a special way. Just as Virginia names its schools for Henry Clay, Patrick Henry or Woodrow Wilson, the Pacific Coast States name theirs for John Muir. His name is beginning to have a real meaning for American youth.

There are many memorials to John Muir, but there are three I want especially to mention. One is the Muir Woods National Monument, a grove of sequoias located not many miles from the northern end of the new Golden Gate Bridge, San Francisco. It was established as a national monument in 1908, during the Administration of Theodore Roosevelt. Here, in a little canyon reached by a narrow toll road, is indeed a Golden Gate exposition of nature. Here is preserved and protected a remnant of the tallest of all tree life, Sequoia sempervirens, as well as an accompaniment of bay trees, madrones and Douglas fir, wildflowers and ferns and wildlife—a little sanctuary of 425 acres, once considered, we are told, as a possible water-supply reservoir for the aqueous and befogged town of Sausalito.

The second memorial I want to mention is to me an equally inspiring one. It is a book entitled "John Muir, a Pictorial Biography," conceived and executed by the pupils of the John Muir School, Seattle, Wash., "in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Muir." It is filled with full-page reproductions of photographs of John Muir and his companions and of significant events of his life. The accompanying letterpress consists of explanations of the pictures, quotations from his many literary works and the words of other men about him, such as this from the great James Bryce, who was born in the same year as Muir:

"John Muir was the patriarch of American lovers of mountains, one who had not only a passion for the splendors of nature, but a wonderful power of interpreting her to men."

The book is an unpretentious but dignified and attractive memorial. The final picture in it is one of the John Muir School itself, just an average-looking American public-school building. John Muir's biographer, William F. Bade, records that "one of Muir's endearing traits was his genuine fondness for children," and I know, therefore, that he would have prized this book beyond measure. There is only one regrettable feature about it—only 300 copies were printed; the plates have been destroyed and it cannot be replaced.

The third memorial is not yet a reality. It is a proposed national park, to be established in California and to be known as the John Muir-Kings Canyon National Park. The proposal, contained in a bill (H. R. 3794) now before Congress, is to unite into one great park Kings Canyon, Redwood Mountain and the present General Grant National Park. Most of the area lies north of and adjoining the Sequoia National Park, which John Muir was instrumental in establishing. Muir was the first to describe the wonderful Redwood Mountain sequoia grove, which contains the largest of all the stands of giant sequoia. In the Redwood Canyon portion of the grove stands the Hart tree, the largest living thing in the world and 4,000 years old.

As for Kings River Canyon, John Muir called it more majestic than Yosemite, and half a century ago he started the movement to make the Kings River country a national park. It contains five valleys that rival Yosemite in the height of sheer walls, rising 3,000 to 5,000 feet above the canyon floor. Gilbert Grosvenor stated that he had seen in this region "at least 100 waterfalls that if they were in Switzerland would have become celebrities."

When consummated, this park will be the supreme memorial to John Muir. It will be a crowning victory for the one who probably did more than any other person to impress on the American people the necessity of conservation, of preserving from wanton destruction and diversion to commercial uses some of the unsurpassed scenic marvels of our country and remnants of the great American wilderness. Future generations of Americans will have a great deal for which to thank John Muir.

Fair Enough

A Needed Inquiry

THE VOLUME of betting on horse races in this country is so large—more than $1,000,000 a day—and the opportunities for larcenous practice and political corruption through bribery are so obvious that this rogue member of the financial community invites the official attention of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The business is interstate, and while there is some doubt that a bookmaker's slip or his nod on the telephone constitutes a security transaction, the system, nevertheless, exists and is a very substantial condition, not a theory.

If race betting were a penny-ante vice, like the numbers racket, it could be ignored by the Federal Government, except in the zone of the income tax, and its policing left to the local cops. But race betting, as the Treasury and Department of Justice have been learning, is a tremendous business, which, roughly speaking, blankets the whole country, and the figures are such as to command the respectful attention of a Government agency charged with the duty of protecting suckers.

Turnover Exceeds $300,000,000 A Year

IN SIXTEEN of the 19 States in which racing was permitted by law the volume of betting through the mutuel machines in 1938 was $276,333,000. If the turnover in the three others—New York, Louisiana and Maine—be conjectured and added to the known figure the total will be about a third of a billion.

In addition to this business, an unknown but large amount was gambled on the races by habitual and occasional players through a chain of books. Some of this betting always finds its way to the tracks, however, where it is wagered through the machines for the purpose of regulating the odds against the interests of those who originally put up the money. Therefore, although we know that betting is an interstate business and that the mutual figures are not final, it is impossible to reckon the gross amount.

It is absolutely certain, however, that rigging is practiced openly, whereby professional gamblers use their clients' money to diminish their winnings when they do win and that in Florida one track pays a premium to such professionals in the form of a trade discount which is not allowed to ordinary bettors.

Interstate Angle Invites SEC Probe

THEORETICALLY, the operators of a track are mere brokers, deducting from 4 to 10 per cent of every dollar wagered through their machines. They can't lose unless the volume of play falls so low that their commissions are unequal to their expenses, and, theoretically, they have no interest in the result of a race. That disinterest loses its fine, impartial purity, however, when race track stock falls into the ownership of professional bookmakers handling millions of public money away from the track.

And certainly no huge, interstate financial business based on public trust and confidence should be permitted to operate under the ownership, whether open or covert, of notorious racketeers and other underworld characters.

It might be argued that because wagers are not legally sound the SEC can have nothing to do with this enormous gambling traffic, which, in its interstate phase, is plainly illegal. Yet within the respective States gambling on the races at the tracks is legal and the claim represented in a winning mutuel ticket is collectible, and, the interstate traffic is so great that the SEC, in the line of its general purpose of protecting the public against swindles, should attempt either to police or suppress it.

Jersey City, Chicago Seen Starting Points

FROM A PRACTICAL standpoint, the SEC might simply acknowledge that the traffic does exist and stifle it by inquiry, for the slightest show of official curiosity would arouse local interest everywhere in corrupt arrangements whereby local authorities permit the bookmakers to operate against the law. Jersey City would be one promising starting point and Chicago another.

It does seem absurd on the face of matters that more or less legitimate business should be compelled to stand close inspection by the SEC when proposing to issue securities in comparatively small amounts, while an interstate gambling traffic of unknown but obviously vast volume is deemed to be beneath the law and, by the SEC's own standards, viciously corrupt.

The exposure of the influence of race track money on local and State governments and the correction of political impurity in these subdivisions may be beyond the duty of this Federal agency. But if these results were achieved just incidentally through a general inquiry there would be no serious public resentment of this invasion of State's rights.

Canadian Heartaches

Their Majesties Can't Visit Every Town

Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN people for the past fortnight have been thinking of little else but the visit of their Majesties. Now that the Empress of Australia, which carried them across the Atlantic, is within the Gulf of St. Lawrence, public enthusiasm is keyed up to fever heat.

Multitudinous have been the preparations to give them a truly royal welcome and provide them with the best hospitality and most varied forms of entertainment that the Dominion can offer. The interdepartmental committee, which is in charge of the arrangements, has been toiling long and late to have every program worked out to the last detail and insure that their Majesties will have every comfort and a chance to see as much of Canada as is possible in the limited time at their disposal, and also that as many as possible of the Canadian people will have an opportunity of seeing them.

There are inevitably many heartburnings and grievances about the program. Two small cities on the St. Lawrence near Ottawa are seething with rage because it has been decided that after the heavy schedule of the final day in Ottawa it would be unfair to ask their Majesties to pay visits to these cities late in the evening, and so the stops at them which were planned have been canceled.

PREMIER Mackenzie King, who has been personally supervising the arrangements with meticulous care, has, however, experienced one disappointment. He had set his heart upon having His Majesty perform the ceremony of prorogation in person on May 18. With this objective in mind, he had made a desperate effort to speed up the program of parliamentary business by an extension of the length of sittings and also holding them on Saturdays.

At one time he seemed to have a good chance of achieving his aim, as the Conservative opposition was disposed to facilitate his plans, but the little C. C. F. (Canadian Commonwealth Federation) Party was strongly opposed to rushing business through in what they felt was indecent haste, and they proceeded with great success to bend their efforts to frustrating the plans of the prime minister.

Thus the debates were spun out and, although Premier Mackenzie King twice initiated discussions about the parliamentary programme and argued that the only alternative to prorogation by mid-May was a long adjournment till the royal visit was over, he failed to break down the resistance of the C. C. F. Party. The latter's attitude came to be supported by papers of divergent views like the Montreal Gazette, the Toronto Globe and Mail, the Ottawa Citizen and the Ottawa Journal.

FACED with these protests and a change of front on the part of Dr. Manion the conservative leader, who on May 10 expressed his conviction that it was impossible to finish the business of Parliament by May 12, the government threw up the sponge both in regard to immediate prorogation and a long adjournment. The plan now is that Parliament will adjourn only for the four days their Majesties will spend in the capital, except for a short session on May 19, when King George will come to the Senate Chamber and give the royal assent to a number of bills and that on May 22 it will reassemble to finish its business.

The government in view of the flood of protests which flowed into Ottawa from the farmers and business interests of western Canada about the reduction of a basic guaranteed price for wheat from 80 to 60 cents per bushel has felt it advisable to raise the guaranteed price to 70 cents, but at the same time it has reduced the scale of payments offered under the acreage bonus scheme.

However, while this increase pacified some of the western malcontents among its followers, it failed to satisfy five of them who bolted from their party on the second reading of the wheat board bill and made common cause with the Leftist groups in demanding that the basic price be kept at 80 cents per bushel. They argued that even this price would not return the average farmer his costs of production. However, the government knew that its supporters from the eastern industrial areas would not stand for any higher price and they stood firm against any further concession.

When the vote was taken on the second reading, the Conservatives, who had accused the government of sabotaging the wheat board and catering to the interests of the private grain firms, voted with the other groups against the bill. But the government had a majority of 128 to 50.

Meanwhile pessimistic news has been coming from the prairie country about the fortunes of the new wheat crop. Thanks to fine weather in the latter half of April, the seeding season has been abnormally early but, although the crop was planted in most places on a good seedbed, there has been very little rainfall in the past three weeks and now word comes of ominous duststorms in central Saskatchewan, and these always bode ill for the prospects of the wheat crop.

THE KING government has evidently made up its mind that as the result of its trade policies, which have lowered many tariff dates, it is going to lose a lot of industrial seats at the next election, and that it must retain the good will of the farming community. So last week it introduced a measure which represents an ambitious effort to tackle the problem of farm and other mortgage debts by the establishment of a central mortgage bank, which is to be operated as an affiliate of the government-owned Bank of Canada.

The ultimate objective of the bank is to reduce the rate of interest on mortgages to 5 per cent. Many urban homeowners will get the benefit of its provisions as they will be applicable to non-farm mortages under the value of $7,000 as well as to all farm mortgages whatever their value may be.

THE PROCEEDINGS of the Senate have been attracting considerable interest. For the past two sessions a special committee which it appointed has been investigating the railway problem with special reference to the possibilities of a merger or unified management for the two rival systems—the State-owned Canadian National and the privately owned Canadian Pacific.

Now that the taking of evidence has been completed a sharp divergence of opinion has developed about the formulation of its report. Senator Meighen, the leader of the Conservative majority in the Senate, drafted a minority report, advocating a system of unified management for the two railways and setting forth the advantages which would accrue from such a move, but his plan was unacceptable to the government. Senator Dandurand, the government leader in the Senate, then induced the special committee by a narrow majority of 7 to 6 to adopt a resolution in favor of more zealous co-operation between the railways in pooling schemes and other measures of economy and the application of measure of compulsion about co-operative efforts through an arbitral tribunel.

Now, when the report comes before the whole Senate, it is open to Senator Meighen to press his plan, and if all his followers support him he can carry it. But such a course would gravely embarrass his leader, Dr. Manion, as he has pronounced definitely against any scheme of unification and the national convention of the Conservative Party went on record against it last July.

Reasons To Be Bared

THE HEARINGS begun this week by the Temporary National Economic Committee—the "monopoly" investigation—may be the most important held by any committee or commission since Franklin D. Roosevelt became President. Certainly they are the most ambitious. They are an effort, so to speak, to put the very heart of our economic system under a fluoroscope.

The heart—our economic pumping station—is investment. Under our system a considerable part of our income is saved. It is deposited in savings banks, paid to life insurance companies, or put in the old sugar bowl on the kitchen shelf. Every dollar that is saved decreases by that much the amount of money in circulation. It is like diverting water from a stream into a pond or a quarry hole. The stream grows smaller and may eventually dry up. If that is to be avoided the water that has been diverted must be pumped into channels that flow back into the stream.

In recent years a large part of the diverted water has not been pumped into the stream. It has simply remained stagnant in our huge reservoirs of savings—the banks, insurance companies, etc. Something seems to be wrong with the pump—investment.

Varied Opinions To Be Heard

AS TO WHAT is wrong with the pump there are all kinds of opinions. The TNEC expects to hear a lot of them this week and next. It will listen to industrialists, investment bankers, and economists. For several months the Securities and Exchange Commission has had a staff of experts of its own examining the pump. They believe that they have found out some things which previously had not been noticed or generally realized.

The hearings are worth close attention, too, because in their course you will see unfolded what is coming to be the dominant economic theory of the New Deal. I say "dominant economic theory" because the New Deal has not sprung any single co-ordinated theory. It has been rather a political and social movement which at various points has ridden roughshod over many classical economic precepts but has had no economic chart of its own.

This rising economic theory is not new, however. It was well enough established to be implicit in some of the things Mr. Roosevelt said in his 1932 campaign for the Presidency, and has underlain many by the action of the New Deal. At its core is the belief that our economic system has reached the point where it cannot be expected to expand so rapidly as it did in the past. As a result it needs less money for new investment in private industry.

Capital Loafing As Well As Labor

ONE POINT that will be brought out in the hearings is that there is technological unemployment for capital as well as for men. New machines and new processes often are capital-saving as well as labor-saving. In many lines the investment required to obtain a given volume of production has declined rapidly.

It will be brought out also that large corporations more and more have been using their own savings to modernize or expand their plants. As a result they have less and less use for the savings of individuals.

Our savings must be channeled back into the economic stream or the stream dries up. If we—all of us together—are saving more money than our private industry can use, we must find other outlets for our savings or else save less. We can lend them abroad or use them to buy securities—holding company securities, for example—which represent no new investment in physical plant. We did both on a great scale during the 1920s, and are still suffering from our rashness.

Investment Study To Be Like Clinic

ANOTHER WAY out is to let the Government take more of our savings and invest them in roads, hospitals, forests and other improvements in the national plant which are outside the realm of private enterprise. This leads into the whole question of Government spending and Government investment, and the differences between them.

There are to be no personal devils at these hearings. It is easier to attract public attention when you can unmask personal devils. But this investment study is intended to be more like a medical clinic than a courtroom. If it were really concerned with medicine, or chemistry, or physics, the public would follow it with intense interest, for the public has learned to read and appreciate news about science. Whether its appetite for economics is as avid is doubtful. But those who want to know whither the New Deal—and the country—is tending will follow these hearings closely.

The Coal Strike

THE SOFT-COAL strike, which involved 330,000 miners, brought about a curtailment of transit service in many cities; paralyzed industrial activity over a large area, cost the rank-and-file workers six weeks' pay and is in a dangerous phase in Harlan County, Ky., where—in contrast to most of the area—it is not settled, is not a strike of the workers against the operators but is a strike of the United Mine Workers, a C. I. O. union having the majority, against the Progressive Miners of America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

The strike has had only one purpose—to give the United Mine Workers a monopoly organization in the coal mines. In order to obtain this monopoly for Mr. Lewis' organization all industry and the whole public has had to suffer.

Declared Violation Of NLRB Spirit

NOW, WHAT was the issue? It was whether the Government was to exert its pressure to compel industry to prevent labor from changing its mind!

It was, therefore, a violation of the essential spirit of the labor relations act, which affirms that labor has the right, under law, to organize itself in unions of its own choosing.

Mr. Lewis does not want another union in the coal mines. To prevent another union he suggested two alternatives—a closed shop, or a "union shop," which is approximately the same thing, or the elimination of the penalty clause in the contract with the operators, which, as it stands, prevents the miners, under a cash penalty, from striking during the life of the contract.

Mr. Lewis wanted the war to be settled on his terms, against the A. F. of L. Union, or he wanted the power to carry it on by continued strikes against the A. F. of L. "enemy."

Dismaying Prospect For Coal Industry

FOR THE OPERATORS such a prospect was dismaying, coal is a sick industry, in any case. It has to compete with oil, gas, electricity and water power. The continuation of the strike—which lasted 50 days—was already leading industrialists to consider changing equipment to burn oil instead of coal. According to the New York Sun the Consolidated Edison was contemplating this.

The strike had repercussions on the public and on all workers, everywhere. New York workers, for instance, had to ride to their jobs on subways even more jammed than usual, because the service was limited by a coal shortage.

Under such pressure Mr. Lewis won, and with the assistance of the Government. Miss Perkins, who took a hand in the conference, eventually displayed impatience with ideological disputes. She declared herself "personally fed up with the idea that a certain agreement or understanding or method that is practical and wholesome and which binds men together and makes men work co-operatively may have metaphysical or ideological implications."

Workers Deprived Of Possible Change

NOW, THE TENDENCY not to care about the "theory" but just to get things done as quickly as possible is a very serious menace to democratic government and democratic control wherever it raises its head.

Having one union in the coal industry and compelling everyone to join it, and having the owners collect the dues, certainly saves a lot of headaches—for everybody, including the owners—but it happens to deprive the workers of any opportunity ever to change their minds and ever to change their union.

The employers and the United Mine Workers will now combine to do what, if the employers and a company union did it, would promptly get them called before the National Labor Relations Board for gross violations of the labor relations act. They will keep the organizers of an independent union out of the mines!

'Machines' Control Most Trade Unions

THE INSTRUMENTS of democratic control of most trade unions are very weak indeed. They are run by the "machines." The members get a chance to vote on general policy, but the most important day-to-day decisions are not submitted to them.

The assumption that all workers desire, forever, to belong to the particular union that they once join has no more justification than the assumption that all voters once enrolled in Republican or Democratic ranks want to stay there forever.

And in the United Mine Workers Union there is a great deal of discontent. Mr. Lewis has been using the U. M. W. as shock troops and a war chest to promote the organization of other industries. This has involved periodic assessment on the miners and the diversion of their funds to the workers of other industries.

It has greatly assisted Mr. Lewis to expand his power, but it has not been enthusiastically watched by all the miners who have been paying to organize the automobile industry, for instance.

So, a great many of them listened favorably to the suggestion that they should get out of the C. I. O. and into the A. F. of L. If the A. F. of L. union had not been taking members away from the C. I. O. Mr. Lewis would not have been worried and would not have called a strike. That seems obvious.

High Wage Scale Doesn't Help Idle

WELL, A POOR SAP of a coal miner doesn't know what's good for him. Hasn't the C. I. O. gotten him better wages and hours than he ever has had? Doesn't he know that real wages in the coal industry have risen between 1929 and 1938 a full 50 per cent and now does he want to knife the hand that has fed him this increase? Isn't it fair that the chiseling Progressive Mine Workers, the A. F. of L. union, should be prevented from interrupting or diverting this wonderful unity?

Maybe, maybe. But the miners also know that members of their craft are leaving mining for WPA. The high wage scale is fine for those who work, but it doesn't help those who don't, and for some workers it is griping to see one's dues, collected in a sick industry, go to help workers in other industries with much higher wage scales and better working and living conditions.

The way this strike was settled means that the workers will never have a chance again to choose regarding their union. The theory, apparently, is that trade unions are always and invariably highly democratic institutions whose sole and only concern is human welfare, led by men who wouldn't dream of autocratic measures or care at all about personal power. Except, of course, the Progressive Miners, the American Federation of Labor, who are scoundrels and in cahoots with the industrialists!

Trade Union Heads Sometimes Are Tyrants

THIS IS PURE nonsense. Some of the worst tyrannies in the democratic world are exercised by trade union bureaucracies. And some of the most stupid and reactionary policies are supported by them and put over on the workers by them. They are often pure autocracies, run by inside cliques, and the check-off is the power to tax and a first lien on wages. In many countries where they have had legally recognized control they have entered into deals with the industrial management at the expense of the rank and file of the men, and at the expense of the unemployed. Like every other social institution, they should not have too much power, for power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely—in trade unions as everywhere else.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Fable

("The President said the trouble was that people who criticized conditions did not offer any suggestions for improving them."—News item)

Once upon a time there was a ruler with new ideas. "Leave the old paths," he said, "and just stick to me. And don't bother about charts, maps or sounding-rods. They're old-fashioned."

Now there was a big depression, the people were running around in circles, pretty well softened up from living off the fat of the land, on rye and white, and they welcomed a leader.

"Just follow me and don't ask questions," said the ruler. "It's all an experiment, but we've got to try something. If it proves to be a mistake I will be first to admit it."

"First?" asked a skeptic.

"You heard me," said the ruler.

So they followed with a great cheering for a while, until some began to get the impression they were going down the slippery sides of a deep cave, and they mumbled, one to another.

"Hadn't we better take some soundings?" cried one.

"You are a reactionary?" said the ruler.

"Wouldn't it be a good idea to stop and think things over," said another.

"What Republican said that?" replied the ruler.

"I think we should stop and have some grips put on our shoes if we are going any farther," said another.

"Tory!" cried the ruler.

It grew darker and more slippery and the people scrambled around aimlessly and with great difficulty, unable to get their bearings.

"I think we should get a searchlight," spoke up one fellow.

"You talk like a capitalist," said the ruler.

"Let us go back, if possible, for a map. Maybe some previous explorer has been over this ground."

"You are just a critic and never offer anything of a constructive nature," said the ruler, as all hands slid down another 50 feet.

It was not impossible to get any grip on the clammy sides of the pit.

"We are sinking rapidly. This may be a bottomless pit," said a man.

"You have been reading the selfish newspapers," said the ruler.

"Isn't it possible you have made a mistake? And didn't you once say you would be first to admit a mistake?" asked another.

"You are not good Americans," said the ruler.

Now a great wailing arose as many got the distinct impression they were up to their necks.

"Help us to get out of here!" they cried.

"That's the trouble with you," said the ruler. "You want to get out of this hole, but you do not tell me how to get you out of it!"

Boarding School Students Poke Fun at Southern Girl Because of Her 'Dialect;' She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a Southern girl attending a Northern school. Since coming here I have been confronted with several problems that I am unable to solve. Consequently, I turn to you for aid. My greatest problem is my Southern dialect. The other students say I talk like an old-time colored mammy. They try to imitate me and to use expressions which I use, such as, "you all," etc. On the other hand, at dances, etc., the girls seem to like my accent. They try to get me to describe the South to them. It is all very embarrassing, as it appears to me that I am a freak. I have tried to acquire a Northern accent but have failed. This school term ends in a couple of weeks, but I would like to know what do. Will you kindly answer immediately? REBEL.

DEAR REBEL: In every school (and particularly in boarding school), in every class, some luckless student usually is made the "goat" for the not very kindly, not very funny, practical-jokester pranks of his fellow students or classmates. Usually the person nominated for this rather difficult role is a person who possesses some marked individual characteristic which sets him apart, for the time being, from his fellows—as in your case, your distinctive "Southern dialect" (see Webster's definition of dialect: "Local or provincial form of language, differing from other forms, especially from the standard or literary form)."

Unquestionably your associates are "ribbing" you, not only in trying to imitate your choice of words and manner of speaking, but also in drawing you out conversationally at dances (getting you to "describe the South for them)," for the benefit of the group. You are, in their opinion, an ever-ready, never-failing source of childish amusement. The only way to turn the tables on them is to refuse to be "kidded," the sense of refusing to take their spoofing seriously. That is to say, don't let it get you down. Laugh with them when they laugh at you; and don't make the mistake of being ashamed of, or embarrassed by, your subtle difference in intonation and accent.

Certainly the Southern voice, when freed—through grammatical cultivation—from marked provinciality of phraseology and pronunciation, is perhaps and most soothing and musical to be heard throughout the length and breadth of the North American continent. It is, as a rule, a low-pitched, leisurely, flexible voice—full of warmth, color and feeling—which falls like a benediction on ears that are sensitive to nuances of sound. It has been authoritatively said, indeed, that the cultivated South Carolinian speaks the purest American-English diction (i.e., choice of words; manner of speaking").

While your manner of speaking, at the moment, may leave something to be desired, I dare-say your voice itself, in substance or in essence, is potentially a great social asset. Rather than try—as you have tried, and failed—to "acquire a Northern accent," I suggest that you concentrate on achieving mastery of correct, fluent English—that is, "the standard or literary forms" of words and phrases for conveying your thoughts, whether spoken or written.

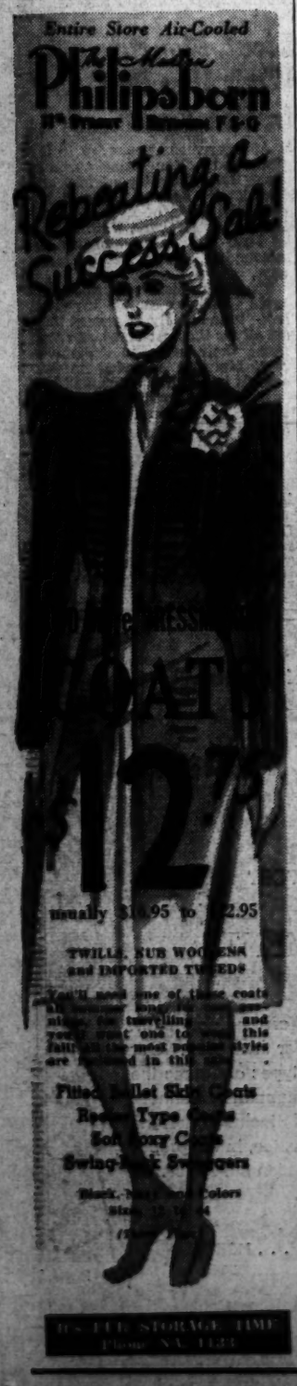
It is indicative of half-education, of sorely limited mental ability or cultural opportunity, to clothe one's conversational offerings in provincial idiom or vernacular. It implies that one's knowledge of one's mother tongue has been acquired by ear, rather than by study, and that one is neither sufficiently discerning nor adaptable to note and correct the easily remediable difference between regional jargon and standard grammar.

I think it would be to your advantage, in all ways, to weed out of your vocabulary such distinctly regional phrases as "you-all," etc., and to substitute in their place more precise (or shall we say, classical?) terms, such as are universally translatable into every tongue. This would mean that you must give more attention to grammar and to rhetoric, to classical writings in poetry and prose, to good language, correctly spoken, as it is heard over the radio and on the legitimate stage—and that you subscribe, in your choice of words and phrases, to this everywhere acceptable standard form.

In other words, it is not your accent which needs correction, so much as it is your knowledge of your mother tongue which needs enlargement. And if I were in your place, when your classmates tease you, I would retort: "Well, how would you say it?" And when (and if) they told me, I would turn their phrase over in my mind and on my tongue, and see if in my opinion, it actually did represent a better mode of expression. And if it did, I would be more than willing to be "off with the old and on with the new."

Whereas you are now twitted for your unmistakeably Southern dialect, I haven't a doubt but that, when you go home for vacation, your home-town associates will accuse you of having picked up the lingo of the "damyankees." But you must remember in that event that the person who tries to please everybody will end by pleasing nobody, himself included; and that your business is to improve yourself (letting the chips of criticism fall where they may) by learning to speak your own language as the classicists have recorded it—or (shall we say?), as the South Carolinians are reputed to speak it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.



Your Figure, Madame!

Measurement Rules Don't Always Apply With Female Figure

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU HAVE a stocky or a slight frame, you probably regard in bleak despair the measurements listed for your height. You can see at a glance that it would be impossible for you to get down—or up, as the case may be—to the measurements that are supposed to be standard. And you are better off if you don't try!

For your reassurance, height is not enough to go by in arriving at a set of bust, waist and hip measurements that are ideal for every figure. It's just not that simple. Whatever your height, your frame also must be taken into account.

Because of their failure to allow for the wide difference in structures, the height averages often reach the height of the ridiculous—as in the theory that the girl 5 feet tall should rave a bust measurement of 30 inches and that for every inch by which her height exceeds 5 feet, another inch feet tall should have a bust measurement.

Not All by Rule

If that rule were to hold true for anyone, it would be the girl who is structurally very small. But supposing that you are 5 feet 2 inches tall, with a very stocky frame. Your normal weight would be 120 pounds and, if it were properly distributed, you could not possibly have only a 32-inch bust measurement.

Or take the rule of the 25-inch waistline for the girl of 5 feet, adding one-half inch to the waistline for each additional inch of height. This would work out beautifully for some figures and not at all for others.

Normal weight and symmetry are the only reliable specifications for a beautiful figure. Given weight within 10 per cent of normal, symmetry depends on a proportionate difference between the bust, waist and hips. The beautiful figure will have a waist that is 8 inches smaller than the bust and hips not more than 3 inches larger than the bust. That's symmetry in all sizes!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Gloria Vanderbilt Now Assumes Role Of America's 'Poor Little Rich Girl,' Already Uses Aliases When Traveling

New York, May 16.

LIKE ALL HUGE crossroads communities, we never run out of poor little rich girls. No sooner does one reach so-called womanhood and perilously marry a dubious baron from foreign parts than a couple of other adolescents spring up to take her place in the papers and over the morning coffee. I think of Barbara Hutton as I first saw her aboard a Europe-bound liner in 1931, plump and unharassed by life and fate.

ALICE HUGHES

Now Babs is doing her post-graduate work in life and matrimony, and into the public niche she once occupied moves Gloria Laura Morgan Vanderbilt, daughter of the beauteous Gloria, senior, and who has just had her vermiform appendix snipped at the ripe old age of 15. Of course, young Gloria's case differs from that of Baba, the Hut, inasmuch as she was the center of that bitter court battle over custody once waged by her mother and her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Not yet in her teens, Gloria Vanderbilt learned the devious arts of dodging reporters and cameramen—and it must be a great relief to her now to be able to face a newspaper photographer with a smile, and not a quick duck of the head. She is growing into a tall, rangy and attractive girl, as I found when I saw her come in from Havana with her aunt. I wonder if she will grow up to be as lovely as her mother, who was traveling abroad when appendicitis bit the child.

Already young Gloria sometimes lives and travels under aliases to avoid newspaper or other public attention. On the Havana jaunt she was "Miss Jo," and since her return she was known as "Miss Whitney" in a Connecticut hideaway. It's all in the great but somehow sad tradition of America's poor little rich girls. I hope and pray she has an easier and happier youth of it than did the Hutton child—or, for the matter of that, her own gorgeous mama.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Stung by jibes about expensive food and things, our World's Fair management acted promptly. Moderate priced eating houses are at last opened, there are ample picnic spots for those who wish to lunch al fresco, and the situation is now calm and pleasant in the grub sector. Thought I'd better let you know about this right away . . .

INCIDENTALLY, Sydney Franken, boss of the big show's secret service, says that during the first week the Fair's cashiers only took in $2.75 in fake money, and that was in quarters and half dollars. Gracious sakes, where are all the green goods we expected the sharks to pass out there? Or is the world really getting good? Oh, it is, hey . . .

Katharine Barker, one of the prettiest of our home town girls, has just married William G. Curran, a broker. It was Kay who was once sparked by young Alfred G. Vanderbilt before his marriage, when he was still the Catch of the Century. Good luck to the Currans, say we all, giving the Chautauqua Salute . . .

AT THAT NIGHT club, El Morocco, they ran off a waltz contest for the customers, and it was won by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bentien, with Tullio Carminati and Peggy Badey nabbing second prize. But most eyes were fixed on a shapely blonde waltzing in fine style—and who was it but Mae Murray, the former screen star whose waltzing in "The "Merry Widow" was one of the peaks of her career? Yep, there was Mae, and she had a very dandy time by the look of her . .

Stretch Like A Cat, Beauty Expert Advises

Miss Agniel Tells How Exercise Saved Her From Invalidism

By Genevieve Reynolds.

STRETCH like a cat. Get down on your hands and crawl. Ape this lithe animal's every movement, if you would relax taunt nerves or develop perfect bodily coordination and grace. This is the advice of Miss Marguerite Agniel, noted dancer, teacher, model and author, who recently demonstrated her theory in a series of illustrated lectures here.

Miss Agniel knows whereof she speaks. For by imitating the stretching of the cat she rose from invalidism to the ranks of America's first rate professional dancers and models.

At 21, this woman was confined to her bed in a helpless state. All her dreams of becoming a great dancer had faded. The doctors prescribed an operation as the only possible cure. She refused, declaring that she would rather die. She grew increasingly despondent over her condition. Then one day she observed the slow, graceful, easy movements of the cat as it stretched. Slowly and painfully she began to simulate this stretch while lying in bed. Little was accomplished at first but she persisted in her efforts. Finally, she was able to move one part of the body and then the other. After the first day she stretched to music. A neighbor furnished the inspiration by playing Dvorak's "Humoresque" on a pipe organ. Later she performed all her cat-like exercises to phonograph records.

Stretching Best Exercise

"Fundamentally," says Miss Agniel, "the best exercises for the average person are based on a few simple animal movements—stretching, relaxing and balancing. And they are the rudiments of all rhythmic self-expression. They lead up to others in natural sequence which, in turn, lay a foundation for others, having as an objective a definite aesthetic goal in the form of a sculptural pose, a graceful sitting or standing posture, or a dance pose."

Here are several adaptations of the cat stretch suggested by Miss Agniel in her recent book, "Your Figure."

To strengthen the back, abdominal and chest muscles, lie on the stomach and push your body up with your arms, keeping the elbows straight, until you feel a strong stretch along the front muscles of your torso, in shoulders and in your back. Then turn to one side, rest on one hip and elbow, and extend the body in another form of cat stretch. Stretch the arms as far overhead as possible, then bring them down to the floor and continue this arm movement in a circular motion. As you raise the arm, stretch the whole torso in as straight a line as possible. Turn over and repeat on the other side.

Arch Back Like Cat

Balance on the hands and knees with the elbows straight and arms and legs at right angles to the body, arch the back as the cat does when angry. At the some time contract or pull up the muscles of the abdomen. Try to flatten them against your back. Tense every muscle. Now drop the trunk in a sway-back position and repeat the exercise about 20 times. Do not jerk the back in this movement, but strive for a thorough rhythmic lifting of the whole spine and an easy relaxation in the downward movement.

"The co-ordination and grace of the body," explained Miss Agniel, "are not dependent upon height or the lack of it. It is ridiculous the limitations women put on themselves and on others because of their supposed lack of figure qualifications. They excuse themselves by saying that they are either too tall or too short. In reality bodily grace is dependent upon proportion, bone coupling and structure."

As for age, Miss Agniel maintains that women are as old as their glands. By that she means that some are old at 30 and others are young at 80. She believes that no woman ever gets too old to do some form of exercise.

"Who is the woman pouring tea—with the jade ring?"

"Oh, that's Mrs. Luker, the treasurer of our board."

"Oh-h-h!"

"We really have some very lovely women on our board. Now take our president—that woman you just met——"

"That Mrs. Whiffle?"

"Yes. Now she was a McMoss. She grew up here and had a big debut and everything."

"Well now who was that Mrs. Pace—in the purple tweeds?"

"Oh, Mrs. Mike McPace. She's on our board, too. She has a place down at Limeburg and a lot of horses."

"She's very smart looking."

"Oh-h-h!"

"Yes. Now you remember that large woman I introduced you to?"

"Which large woman?"

"The one in the chartreuse print . . . with the yellow daisies. Now that's Mrs. Mike Pace's aunt, Miss Jennie Van Stiff. She's got the sweetest house, and her antiques are priceless—simply priceless.

"She's marvelous. The Van Stiffs have lived here forever."

"Say, tell me, who is the woman in the trylon hat?"

"Which trylon hat?"

"Oh, that's Mrs. Toddy. She's on our board, too."

"She has an awfully good figure."

"She's a fascinating person. He's a big wheat speculator. Wouldn't you like to meet her?"

"Yes, just as soon as I get rid of this cucumber sandwich."

"Oh, and there's another woman I want you to meet—see the one eating a shrimp . . . in the poke bonnet. That's Mrs. Mark Stepp. She's on our board, too. They've just bought an old estate down in Virginia."

"Didn't I meet a Mrs. Stepp?"

"That was Mrs. Peter Stepp. She's lovely, too, though of course they haven't as much money as the Mark Stepps. Oh there comes Mrs. Wadd—see, with the silver fox and the cane."

"Oh-h-h!

"She's one of our directors. I want you to meet her. He made his money in paper boxes. They've been everywhere . . . traveled the world over and over. They're both terribly attractive."

"I'd love to meet her. I guess I'm ready now . . . Just as soon as I get rid of this empty plate."

"Here—stick it in with these phonograph records. 'How do you do Mrs. Budd' . . . That was Mrs. Aspic Budd; he's head man in some big business here—I've forgotten what it is . . . 'Oh, how do you do?' . . . I was just speaking to Mrs. Smirk over there—they've got the most adorable garden . . . Oh see, there's Mrs. Lawrence Puffer . . . the one in the baku hat. Come on, I want you to know her. They have their own yacht and go everywhere——"

Say, just a minute. Who is that woman over there by the door—that just came in?

"We-ll, I don't believe I know just who she is—wait! I believe it's Mrs.—— Oh, what is her name? Well, she's a woman sculptor, or a painter, or something. Or else she's written a book. Well, anyway, I know she's done something. Do you want to meet her?"

Tell Fortunes At Parties

THE MAGNET that draws the crowd at a party—that's you when you play fortune-teller. And so easy to learn card meanings—spin fortunes like an exciting serial story.

"Lucky Jill," you beam, turning up the queen of hearts, "a blonde woman will introduce you to a new beau.

"Watch out for a phone call—the new beau," you go on, glancing at the six of hearts. And the two of clubs promises an invitation to lunch.

But beware! Here's a dark woman—the queen of spades—a rival for Jill, perhaps. No, here comes the happy ending! "Diamonds," you cry, "the ace—that means an engagement ring."

Easy to go on from there—when you know what the other cards tell. Ten of diamonds is a legacy. Two of spades—alas—is tears! The two of hearts means happy days ahead, is tops as a good luck card.

Fun to know other jolly ways to tell fortunes, too. Around the blazing campfire you read the future in embers, sparks. Those that fly nearest you are your fortune. You see a pipe-shaped ember? Adventure's coming. A star? Wealth and honor. A fan? Flirtation with a stranger.

Social Registers Combed for 1,300 Invited to Meet Sovereigns Here

List for Garden Party at British Embassy June 8 for King and Queen Includes High Government Officials

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

SOCIAL REGISTERS from a number of cities and Lady Lindsay's personal records were thoroughly combed for names of the 1,300 persons invited to glimpse King George and Queen Elizabeth at the British Embassy garden party on June 8.

The American-born wife of the British Ambassador averred this yesterday at her press conference and also mentioned that she was receiving on the average of 60 letters a day, the majority of which have been requests for invitations. The list, which also includes a generous layer of topflight Government officials and diplomats, is closed, she said, and no additions or substitutions are to be made. She added that the 13,000 enemies probably resulting from invitation omissions are her's and her's alone—not England's and not any social secretary's.

She stressed, however, that not all guests—even from out of town—were gleaned from the social register and that an effort had been made to invite representative persons from all over the country. The problem of having to leave out names of sons and daughters has caused her real anguish, Lady Lindsay continued. She realizes that young ladies, particularly, would like to see Their Majesties, and she knows many mothers would much rather have their daughters invited than to attend themselves. Lady Lindsay expressed regret that this could not be arranged.

Whether feminine guests shall wear street-length frocks or trailing ones is still a question frequently put to Lady Lindsay. She declines to decide. Yesterday, however, she repeated her suggestion that women wear to the party any type of dress they would don on any summer afternoon. In this connection she observed that the Embassy lawn would be dusty if the weather is dry and hot, and muddy if it rains, and that it might therefore not be advisable to wear trailing frocks.

To Curtsy or Not Is Still a Question

To curtsy or not to curtsy, and to bow or not to bow are problems that Americans will have to decide for themselves, Lady Lindsay said. English subjects, of course, will bend and bow in the presence of Their Majesties, and court etiquette will be carried out by members of the British Embassy staff so far as is possible.

"Purely official" will be the list for the British Embassy dinner at which Their Majesties will be hosts on June 9 and President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be guests of honor. There will be 34 or 36 persons at the dinner. Chairs for the King and the Queen probably will be opposite each other, American fashion, with Mrs. Roosevelt's place on the King's right and the President's on the right of Queen Elizabeth's.

Lady Lindsay implied that she and Sir Ronald will be seated far below the salt.

Although Lady Lindsay has been up, dressed and at her desk working every morning for the past ten days, plans have not yet been completed for the dinner; invitations have not gone out; and the menu has not yet been selected.

There, again, the responsibility will be all hers, Lady Lindsay said. Whether such typically English dishes as roast beef and Yorkshire pudding will be featured, or whether Their Majesties shall have an authentic United States meal served up for them and their guests, is one problem she has not yet had time to solve.

Meanwhile, an all-America menu with trimmings has been worked out for the State dinner to be given by President and Mrs. Roosevelt in honor of Their Majesties. Featuring such items as broiled filet of flounder, sliced tomatoes, cranberry sauce, buttered beets and ice cream, the royal bill of fare with a strict American accent (not a French word on the whole list) will stand as it is, unless the King and Queen request a change. And it isn't likely they will.

Their Majesties Have "Simple Tastes"

Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, housekeeper at the Executive Mansion, worked out the menu after making a detailed study of dishes Their Majesties had been served at a number of functions both in their own country and in Paris.

Lady Lindsay said at her press conference yesterday that the King and Queen were a gentleman and a lady with simple tastes and since both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt prefer simple food, the menu making for the White House dinner was not as difficult as it might have been.

Their Majesties will decide for themselves what shall be served up to them for breakfast on their one morning at the White House. Their private luncheon with President and Mrs. Roosevelt will feature minted melon balls, jellied bouillon, broiled sweet breads and mushrooms and strawberry short cake.

Thrift Shop to Hold White Elephant Sale Friday to Assist Its Charities

SINCE IT WAS founded by Mrs. John R. ("Ma") Williams, the Thrift Shop, which turns trash into cash for charity's sweet sake, has had many unusual requests for articles. But Mrs. Helena Graham, the manager, was frankly stumped the other day when a prominent woman came in and asked for a picture of an ancester. Anybody's would do, it seems, just so the portrait would do her credit when hung on the drawing room wall. Which reminds us of the social leader, now dead, whose entire lower floor was hung with portraits of impressive, but phoney, ancestors, all done up in ruffs and purchased at various auction sales in Virginia.

Another recent Thrift Shop request was a casual demand for an original Van Dyck. Mrs. Williams promises to supply practically everything else at the White Elephant sale to be held at the shop on Friday, with tea served in the afternoon.

OCCASIONALLY some really valuable things turn up among the shop's contributors' "trash," recently a collection of papers and manuscripts which once belonged to the Custis family, and which a friend had found in an old trunk in the attic, were sent in. Among the papers was an unfinished letter written by Mrs. Robert E. Lee to her mother, Mrs. M. L. Custis, and completed by Gen. Lee in 1832. It was purchased by the Library of Congress, the money going into the Thrift Shop Treasury.

The other day members of the board of lady visitors of the Children's Hospital, which is among the shop's beneficiaries, decided to give a present to the hard-working superintendent, Miss Mattie Gibson, as a token of appreciation. One of the women sounded her out and found that what she really wanted above all things was a cartload of fertilizer. Seems she had been wanting all spring to have some work done on the grounds. She promptly got her fertilizer.

PAGING RIPLEY: Theodore Achill s, of the State Department, scored a bona fide birdie while playing golf the other day at Chevy Chase. One of his drives bounced off a bunker and decapitated an unfortunate oriole standing nearby.

MARQUIS Benedetto Capomazza, of the Italian Embassy, has received the official cable transferring him to duty at the foreign office in Rome. It has been rumored that he was to leave, and then that he wasn't, but now he and his bride, the former Betty Hardie, will sail early in the summer.

Note: One of the most colorful figures in Washington's circle of domestics is Mousbah, the Arab servant who works for the Capomazza household. Mousbah speaks a language all his own, and when he phones every morning to the store for groceries, says "I want a thousand oranges and a slice of bread. The grocer knows that this means a dozen oranges and a loaf of bread.

CLARENCE HEWES has gone to the World's Fair to see whether it will change his dislike of modern architecture. Mr. Hewes, incidentally, will bring out a niece next winter in Washington. Her name is Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, and she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Flowerree, of New Orleans. Mr. Hewes will give both a tea and a ball in her honor.

Procope Tells Writers of Finnish Life

Women Hear Envoy In His First Address in America

The Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procope, made his maiden speech since arriving in this country two or three months ago at the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club, held yesterday at the Willard. He talked briefly on the geography and life of his country, a land of forests and thousands of lakes, a part of which lies above the Arctic Circle.

M. Procope described the status of women in Finland, which is similar to that enjoyed by those of the United States. He told how his country was the first in Europe to appoint a woman cabinet minister, and how members of the fair sex engage in business and journalism on an equal footing with men. He also answered "off-the-record" questions on arrangements for the Olympic Games to be held in Helsingfors in 1940.

The minister, who combines great ability with unusual charm, was introduced by the president of the club, who explained that he had been a business man, a Cabinet member, and a president of the League of Nations Council before coming to represent his country at Washington.

Behind the speaker's table hung a flag of the United States together with the blue and white flag of Finland. The club member in charge of decorations had some difficulty finding the latter, as the State Department, where she first tried, reported that all its foreign flags were doing duty at the New York World's Fair. So it was the Finnish Legation which provided the standard.

Among the guests of the club at the luncheon were Dr. Sigurd von Numers, legation secretary, and his pretty wife, who wore a navy blue redingote dress with a cluster of bright colored flowers at the bodice. They will leave the end of the month for Dr. von Numers' newly assigned post at the foreign office.

Mrs. Emil Hurja also sat at the speaker's table, and other guests present included Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, wife of the president of the Export-Import Banw; Mrs. A. M. Nevius, and Mrs. John Oliver Lagorce.

Myrtle Collins Becomes Bride

The wedding of Miss Myrtle Althea Collins, daughter of Mrs. J. William Umhau, to Ralph Anthony Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Joseph Meyer, took place yesterday at the Holy Name Catholic Church, the Rev. John W. Dowling officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, James Alvin Collins, wore a white marquisette frock trimmed with lace, and a brief net veil caught with sprays of lilies of the valley. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley, with a center of gardenias. Mrs. James Donohue, the matron of honor, was attired in blue net with a large picture hat, and carried talisman roses.

Thomas Barnes was best man, and the ushers were John D. McGregor and Frank L. Lerch. A small reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for a Southern cruise. They will make their home at 325 Franklin street.

Lieut. Moncure Weds Miss Belt In San Francisco

At a ceremony yesterday in the Cathedral of San Francisco, Miss Jane Belt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Haller Belt, of that city, became the bride of Lieut. Samuel Pemberton Moncure, U. S. N., son of Mrs. William A. Moncure, of Alexandria, and the late Mr. Moncure.

They were married at noon, the bride wearing a simple traveling suit. Immediately afterward they set off for the East Coast, and will make their home in Annapolis. Mrs. Moncure attended private schools in San Francisco, and her husband was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1932.

First Lady Discusses Visit of Sovereigns

Mrs. Roosevelt Unable to Find Linen Blanket for Settee, One of the Articles Recommended for Comfort of King

By Jesse Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

His Britannic Majesty King George VI may not find a linen blanket on his settee when he arrives at the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt said so yesterday. She told members of the Seventy-sixth Club at their luncheon she was afraid that was one of the listed requirements for the King's comfort the White House could not fill—she didn't know what a linen blanket was.

The First Lady, guest of honor at the club's first spring luncheon at the Washington Hotel, gave the women, who are wives of new members of Congress, opportunity to ask questions after she had talked briefly. Her talk had been on other subjects but all the questions were on the approaching royal visit.

Lists and memoranda come daily from the State Department, Mrs. Roosevelt said. "Various embassies seem to be troubled about whether the King and Queen will be comfortable.

"Some of the instructions, even those from Americans, are written by persons abroad who have no knowledge of Washington in June," she said, referring to the item asking that hot water be available for the ladies-in-waiting who would bring their own hot-water bottles along.

Another detail she found had been all taken care of was clothes. "The Queen and I are going to wear wool dresses when we meet, hers made from wool of sheep grown in this country and mine from wool of sheep raised in some of the British Dominions. I had been thinking we both would die but mine has come and it is very sheer so I feel a little cheered."

Don't Want Flowers to Fade

One amusing memorandum was that advising her to be sure to have enough vases because the Queen would be given flowers wherever she went and would need something to put them in when she returned to the White House.

"I never knew there could be so many details about anything in the world," said Mrs. Roosevelt.

She said she felt sure the King and Queen knew nothing of the efforts everyone was making to have things in America just like they were at home for them. Because they are young, She thinks it will not be so hard to make them comfortable.

"We should be devoutly thankful," she said, "that we don't have people saying 'this is the way it was done for your grandmother and it must be done this way for you.' "

She explained the anxiety of the British subjects for the comfort of their monarchs by the fact that they have grown up in the atmosphere where the fact that something has always been done a certain way makes it imperative that it should be continued that way, whereas "the principals might welcome a change although those about them spend all their time seeing to it that nothing is ever changed."

Other questions had to do with the matter of curtsying on which Mrs. Roosevelt quoted the State Department decision and whether the King would make a speech—phaps a few words to Congress, she said—and just now she would greet the Queen.

"We will go to the train as we did for the Nicaraguans," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Shake-hands when we greet them; they will stand next to us, present all their entourage and then we will present the Cabinet."

She remarked that the 30 or 40 persons who will accompany the King and Queen will make "quite a party to start with" at all the affairs to be given for Their Majesties. The White House, built like a Southern home, leaves some things to be desired when it comes to facilities for entertaining royal visitors and accommodating their retinue, she observed.

Mrs. Johns Heads The 76th Club

Mrs. Joshua Johns, wife of Representative Johns, of Wisconsin, president of the Seventy-sixth Club, presided at the luncheon which was in charge of the members from the Middle Western States. Mrs. Roosevelt was presented with a corsage of orchids grown in Oklahoma and given handkerchiefs from Houston, Texas. Firms in other States contributing cereals, eversharp pencils, little bread boards in the shape of pigs and various other products as souvenirs for all the guests. There are now 78 members in the club, is was announced.

Mrs. Wilbur Mills, of Arkansas, and Mrs. Rudolph Tenerowicz, of Michigan, both mothers of babies, were presented gifts for the infants and Mrs. E. C. Gathings, of Arkansas, the only bride in the club, was presented with a bridal gift.

The Women's Bar has 300 members, nearly 30 of whom plan to attend the convention of the American Bar in San Francisco, July 10 to 15.

District P.-T. A. Opens Two-Day Convention; 600 Delegates Attend

Mrs. Walter B. Fry, Retiring President, Is Presented With Silver Tea Service Elections Scheduled to Take Place Today

The only way to teach democracy is to provide opportunity to practice it; to train people to find out facts and make decisions in the light of facts.

This was the theme of an address by Dr. Willard W. Beatty, supervisor of education in the United States Office of Indian Affairs, before the opening session of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers' annual two-day session yesterday at the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution avenue.

"Pseudo-democratic organizations are set up in schools and other institutions to train young people in democracy, but they rob them of the most vital part of it," he said. "They provide for voting but fail to lay emphasis on learning the facts in a situation. Voting is secondary. The primary requirement is to know what the voting is for. The habit of voting without knowing what it is all about is bad for democracy.

"The home and school should give a realistic opportunity to young people, in consultation with their elders, to make decisions after a study of facts. There is no age at which people become suddenly mature or wise. We learn wisdom through the practice of judgment," he declared.

Nearly 600 Attend Sessions

Nearly 600 delegates were registered yesterday afternoon for the first day's session. Mrs. Walter B. Fry, retiring president of the Congress, opened the convention and reports of committee activities during the year were presented in the morning. In the afternoon, S. J. McCathran, attorney for the District Congress in the recent controversy over the proposed removal of the national headquarters from Washington to Chicago, gave a chronological report of the steps taken by the District Congress to prevent the move before action had been taken by the national convention. He advised that the matter now be dropped.

The $10,000 trust fund which had been held for a headquarters to be located here will now go to George Washington University, he said.

Mrs. Barse Presents Names

Mrs. George P. Barse, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the slate of new officers to be voted on today, headed by Mrs. C. D. Lowe, retiring first vice president. A moving story of friendship and gratitude accompanied her presentation of Mrs. Lowe's name. When Mrs. Barse's son, Joseph, was ill last winter and physicians said a blood transfusion was necessary to save him, Mrs. Lowe's son, Ralph, was the one who gave his blood. It marked the turning point in Joseph's recovery, said his mother.

Other officers who will be elected without opposition will be Mrs. P. C. Ellet, first vice president; Mrs. J. Darlington Denit, third vice president; Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, fifth vice president, and Mrs. W. U. Streeter, seventh vice president.

The convention opened yesterday with a procession led by five Boy Scouts of Troop 24. They were Robert Dellaway, Charles Schneider, Steuart Smith, Joseph Todd and Elbert Henson. Dr. Walter E. Price, of Northminster Presbyterian Church, offered the invocation.

After the report of Mrs. Fry as retiring president, a silver tea service was presented to her by Mrs. George C. Cornwall, hospitality chairman, in behalf of the congress.

Panel Talk For Today

Today, a panel discussion on "Guiding Environment in a Democracy" wil be presented at the morning session at 10:30. Mrs. Myrtle Moore, seventh vice president, will preside. Taking part in the discusion will be Miss Dorothy Davidson, of the District Girl Scouts; Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples, of the Community Center; Dr. C. W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools; Dr. P. Paul Schearrer, representing the church; Mrs. Charles H. Peirce, representing the home; E. A. Drumm, Y. M. C. A., and Miss Esther Dudley, speaking on adjustment possibilities. Music will be furnished by the Stuart Junior High School Glee Club.

The convention will close with the annual fellowship dinner, to be held in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel at 7 p. m. tonight.

Tea for Naval Staff

More than 100 guests were present yesterday afternoon at the tea given by the Naval Hospital Unit of the Gray Ladies, in the recreation room of the hospital. It was a farewell party in honor of Capt. George C. Thomas, medical officer in command, and other members of the staff who are soon to be transferred.

Vandenberg Opens War on Florida Canal

Terms Project a 'Sublimated Ditch' And 'Pipe Dream'

A bipartisan fight to head off the $200,000,000 Florida ship canal recommended by the President yesterday was opened in the Senate by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who called it "a sublimated ditch" and a "pipe dream."

Vandenberg, who succeeded in killing the project two years ago after the President allotted relief funds to start it, assailed the revived canal bill as a "gigantic blank check," economically unjustifiable, and equaling in cost all money budgeted for other rivers and harbors construction in the next fiscal year.

Leaders Press for Vote

Senate leaders pressed for a vote today after Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, took the floor with a blanket denial of Vandenberg's charges and declared the canal opposition was actually directed at the Roosevelt Administration.

The vote on the bill, reported by the Senate Commerce Committee "without recommendation," promised to be close, as both sides claimed victory.

Pointing to elaborate charts on the Senate walls illustrating the 195-mile canal across the Florida Peninsula, Vandenberg said that "if this issue is to be settled by pictures there should be some others here."

"I should like," he said, "to see a picture of one of those big dredges stationed outside Secretary Morgenthau's office trying to dig $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 out of an empty Treasury."

The Michigan Senator said the project was "an insufferable affront" to those who believe "Congress sooner or later intends to protect the public credit."

Pepper countered that Government experts agreed there would be no substantial damage to the Florida underground water supply. He charged railroads opposing the project had created this fear, and denied Vandenberg's statement that railroad traffic would suffer. He argued the canal would be of inestimable value to intercoastal shipping.

Green Backs Project

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor meanwhile wrote Senators to "give every support to the project, which he said the A. F. of L. regards as "a commercial and military necessity." Pepper told the Senate the A. F. of L. would not support any "boondoggling" project.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, indicated he would offer an amendment to make the canal self-liquidating, through a toll system.

Milk Price War Forecast in D. C.

sentative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, who opened the session with an appeal to the House subcommittee to break down the "trade barriers," which, he said, has given producers in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia a monopoly.

Schulte threw the otherwise drab hearing into an uproar when he complained that the District health regulations have been encumbered with expensive frills to the detriment of both the farmer and the consumer.

He denied that the fight over the milk market here is between Indiana and Maryland or Virginia.

"This is a fight to knock down trade barriers," he said. "Our first thought is of the consumer."

Treadway, in making an appeal for a modification of the health regulations, said:

"We do not ask any relaxation in any safeguards to the health of the people of the District. On the contrary, our State is prepared to pledge its wholehearted co-operation as an exporter in the enforcement of health regulations within the District."

Treadway said that 25 per cent of the income of the people of Indiana comes from dairy products. Indiana producers furnish about one-third of the milk supply of Chicago, where milk is delivered to the home for 11 cents a quart, he said, and sold in stores for 9 cents a quart.

Cross-examination of Treadway and other Indiana witnesses developed the fact, however, that Western producers consider it impractical to ship milk into Washington to compete with farmers in the local milkshed. They do want to sell cream, which can be transported more economicaly, for fluid consumption.

Western cream is now admitted into Washington under permits for ice cream manufacturing and allegedly has been diverted into fluid consumption when "bootlegged."

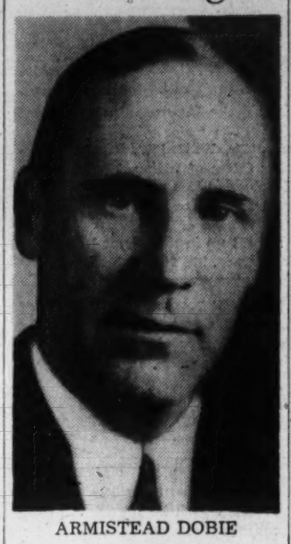
H. E. Schenck, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau, stated that the State derives $50,000,000 annually from its dairy products.

Representative Hull, who has long fought the battles of Western dairy producers in Washington, said that the District has the most stringent health regulations governing milk production in the country.

He expressed doubt that these regulations were designed primarily to protect the health of Washington residents.

Citing articles appearing in The Washington Post relative to the high rate of tuberculosis and other diseases in the District, Hull pointed out that tuberculosis has been all but eradicated in Wisconsin. He expressed the opinion that a more widespread consumption of milk in Washington would improve the public health record.

Glass and Byrd Approve Dobie As Va. Judge



ARMISTEAD DOBIE

Senators Support Nomination of Dean Of Law School

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated 58-year-old Armistead M. Dobie, dean of the University of Virginia law school, as Federal judge for the Western District of Virginia, after obtaining assurances that the appointment is acceptable to Senators Glass and Byrd.

Dobie's name was not on the list of candidates recommended by the Virginia Senators when they rejected the President's nomination of Floyd H. Roberts as "personally offensive and obnoxious." Byrd said yesterday, however, that he and his colleague consider Dobie "thoroughly qualified."

Gov. Price, whom Glass accused during the Roberts row of attempting to gain "veto power" over Federal patronage in Virginia, told reporters he first heard of the Dobie nomination at luncheon in the White House yesterday.

"Old Friend" of Senators

Glass and Byrd charged last January that the Roberts nomination was intended as punishment for their failure to support certain New Deal legislation. Mr. Roosevelt, they asserted, was attempting to clear all Federal appointments in Virginia through Gov. Price, as leader of the Democratic faction opposing the Glass-Byrd organization.

Dobie, described by Byrd as "a very old friend" of himself and Glass, first met Mr. Roosevelt on the President's recent visit to the Charlottesville home of Franklin Roosevelt, jr., University of Virginia law student.

A native of Norfolk, Dobie received degrees from the University of Virginia and Harvard law school before opening practice in St. Louis in 1904. He joined the Virginia law faculty three years later and was appointed dean in 1932.

A World War Officer

Dobie served in the World War as a captain and later as a major attached to the A. E. F. general staff. His only experience in public office came in 1935 when he was commissioned for a few months as a special Assistant Attorney General. He is unmarried.

Author of two standard reference works in the legal field, Dobie is a member of the Supreme Court's advisory committee on drafting rules of procedure for the lower courts.

In 1920 he was a member of the Virginia delegation to the Democratic National Convention, supporting Glass for the Presidential nomination.

D. C. Welfare Budget Sent To Senate

President Approves $234,440 Estimate For Children Aid And WPA Service

The Bureau of the Budget late yesterday recommended to the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations supplemental estimates totaling $234,440 for the continuation and expansion of child welfare and nonconstruction WPA services.

Forwarded by the President through Harold D. Smith, director of the Budget Bureau, the supplemental items project the 1940 supply bill, as passed by the House, well beyond the $47,000,000 mark and increase the estimated deficit to approximately $400,000.

Largest item is $177,500 as the District's contribution to continue the following nonconstruction WPA projects: Free lunches for indigent school children, sewing classes, household service, housekeeping aides, adult education, nursery schools and recreation.

Recommend Use of Balance

In addition to this $177,500, the President and the Budget Bureau recommended that the unexpended balance of $12,000 which is expected to remain from the 1939 appropriation for those WPA services, be made available during the coming fiscal year.

For the purpose of establishing two new child welfare services and expanding the existing home-finding and child-placement services, all under the Board of Public Welfare, the Budget Bureau approved the appropriation of $54,949 to hire the needed personnel and $2,000 for traveling and other expenses.

In his budget message, Smith pointed out that the child welfare allotment was granted as the result of findings in the survey conducted by Jacob Kepecs and which has been accepted by the Commissioners and Board of Public Welfare.

One of the innovations would be known as the "preventive and protective service" whose purpose would be "the improvement of family conditions which, if left uncorrected, would ultimately cause the children in such families to become wards of the Board of Public Welfare, thereby becoming a continuing expense to the District taxpayer because of the necessity of placement either in paid foster homes or in public institutions."

Extend Parole System

The other new function is an "institutional service," which would extend the parole system to the Industrial Home School for White Children and the Industrial Home School for Colored Children. This system is now maintained at the National Training Schools for boys and girls.

It is proposed to hire, at each of the industrial schools, a $2,000 parole supervisor, a $2,600 chief of service, and a $1,440 junior clerk-stenographer.

There are now 33 employes in the welfare board's home-finding and placement departments. The former finds foster homes which are willing to take care of children, either with or without pay. The 1940 budget provides for a staff of three to handle this work and yesterday's action adds one more social worker at $2,000 per year.

Staff of 30 Allowed

For the placement service, which complements the other, the 1940 budget allows a staff of 30. Under yesterday's supplemental estimates, the number of supervisors would be increased from two to three, at a cost of $2,600, and the number of social workers from 17 to 21, at a cost of $8,000. In addition, $2,000 is recommended for office supplies, furniture and other equipment, travel expense and other incidentals.

Board of Public Welfare salaries, which were $114,190 in the 1940 budget, are now up to $169,130, dependent upon final approval by Congress.

A significant departure from the House's action was noted when, in the course of the public welfare discussions, Chairman Overton of the Senate sub-committee indicated that he favors a $60 "ceiling" for relief. The House bill provides that no family shall receive relief payments in excess of $48.

Overton's opinion is that $48 is reasonable for a family of five but that a $12 margin should be provided for the benefit of larger families.

$400,000 Deficit Expected

The $46,915,207 supply bill which passed the House envisages an approximate of $185,000, assuming that the $5,000,000 Federal lump sum contribution and the present $1.75 real estate tax rate are unchanged. Accordingly, yesterday's supplemental estimates boost the anticipated deficit to more than $400,000.

At the forenoon session, the Overton sub-committee heard testimony unanimously in favor of building the proposed National Guard armory at the foot of East Capitol street. Witnesses in behalf of that site were Brig. Gen. A. L. Cox, commanding officer of the Guard; Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Overton Favors Capitol Site

Senator Overton previously had indorsed the East Capitol street site. The House bill makes location of the armory in the southwest section mandatory.

Discussion of health and hospital items in the 1940 budget may come up today, although it is more likely that the hearings will be opened for the first time to private citizens and representatives of civic groups, and that the public health and hospital officials will be heard later.

More than 60 individuals have requested to be heard by the sub-committee.

Service Would Connect Connecticut Ave., 14th St. and Georgia Ave.

With a unanimous vote the Petworth Citizens Association last night urged establishment of cross-town bus service through Rock Creek Park to connect Connecticut avenue, Fourteenth street and Georgia avenue.

After a committee report pointed out that there is no cross-town transit route in the uptown area, a committee was authorized to petition the Capital Transit Co. to set up the service.

Members also approved a resolution seeking enlargement of the Petworth School Playground. District traffic problems and precautionary measures to avert accidents were discussed by H. V. Scribner, representing the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Dr. Henry G. Knight, chief of the bureau, presided.

Gangster's Bride Wins Annulment

Benny Ertel, New York gangster waiting trial for murder, yesterday lost the bride he won here more than a year ago by pretending he was Jack Barry, a poor but honest citizen.

Justice O'Donoghue in District Court granted an annulment to Mrs. Ruth Nash Ertel, after she told how Ertel courted her from January to March, 1938, a courtship which ended in marriage at Rockville. She said she learned the truth about her husband when he was arrested in June. Attorney T. Edward O'Connell observed the proceedings for Ertel, who is in jail in New York for the death of a detective in a holdup two years ago.

Blimp Blinks Lights as It Sails Above Parading Guards' Guns

Anti-Aircraft Rifles Silent While 1,500 Men March in Annual Review on Mall; Civic Leaders Guests; Medals Awarded

Several airplanes and the sightseeing blimp passed within easy range of some of the District National Guard's $2,500,000 worth of anti-aircraft guns over the Mall last night. The guns were trained aloft while 1,500 troops paraded for Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, their commander, and guests, in the Guard's annual review.

But to emphasize peace the blimp blinked its lights in tempo with the music of the 121st Engineer's Band. And officials of the Washington Board of Trade, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and the Federation of Citizens Associations helped Gen. Cox present service medals to officers and enlisted men.

The review was held between Fourth and Sixth streets and was witnessed by a large number of guests who included Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Board of Trade; L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations; Arthur J. Sundlun, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor; Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, Fifth Marines, retired, and a score of others.

The Engineers and the Coast Artillery bands were in line.

Medals were awarded before the parade and after it there was a reception at the armory.

Professors Suggest Merit System for All Bureau Chiefs

Prof. Arthur W. Macmahon and Instructor John D. Millett, of the Columbia University department of government, have concluded that the time is ripe to bring all Federal Bureau chiefs within the merit system.

Their book, "Federal Administrators," issued today, in which the observation was made, resulted from a survey of 62 units in the Departments of State, Labor, War, Treasury, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Navy, Justice and Postoffice. Among their findings were:

That the average head of a Federal Government bureau is 58 years old, has served as a chief for 16 years, and was chosen from the ranks of Government employes. They added:

"It has been the transient chiefs, selected under political or semi-political auspices, who have contributed most to the sort of bureau autonomy which is unwholesome, for they have reflected the diverse factionalism that attends the use of patronage."

Capt. Towers Tells SAE of Naval Air Program

The Naval aviation program cannot be separated from the Naval building program as a whole, Capt. John H. Towers, of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, told the Washington Alumni Association of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity at a luncheon yesterday in the Harrington Hotel.

As all naval aircraft are either carried aboard ships or depend upon tenders for their servicing, he pointed out, the number of naval planes must depend on the number of surface ships.

It was just 20 years to the day since Capt. Towers had commanded the first transatlantic mass flight, he told the group.

Discussing progress since then, Capt. Towers declared that there was now no limit to the size airplanes could be built, except the question of money.

Corby Estate Files Tax Refund Action In Montgomery

Refund of $12,527 in taxes paid since 1928 allegedly in error by the estate of the late Charles I. Corby, is asked in a petition filed yesterday with the Montgomery County commissioners at Rockville by the National Savings & Trust Co., trustees.

The taxes were paid on stocks and bonds owned by the estate. The last schedule filed by the estate was in 1928 and since that time the taxes have been paid on the basis of that return whereas the stocks and bonds are of less value, the petition states, and therefore it is alleged that the taxes were paid in error and should be refunded.

The petition was referred to Miss Vivian V. Simpson, counsel to the commissioners, for study.

Refugees Need NoAid of Chest, Forum Told

Jewish Appeal Leader Says Relatives and His Group Care for Them

Refugees from Central Europe do not need to look to the Community Chest for help, Isidore Hershfield, honorary chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, told the Community Chest Federal Forum yesterday. He explained the Appeal takes full care of them.

Most of the refugees join relatives and need no help from charity, he said, at a luncheon at Child's Restaurant on Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Others bring with them skills unknown in Washington and support themselves making fancy gloves or decorating glassware. Thus new industries are brought to America, he pointed out, for which this country formerly was dependent on foreign sources.

More than 200 Washington employers co-operate with the appeal in finding jobs for refugees, he continued. Large establishments make additional room for employes so newcomers don't compete with resident unemployed, he explained.

Morris Klass, director of the Jewish Social Service Agency, told the group that $1 spent by a private agency in preventive work saved $10 of Federal funds that otherwise would be spent in rehabilitation.

Besides giving financial aid, Community Chest family service agencies handle many cases of personal problems, he said, helping people back to work instead of giving them money.

State Labor Parley Ousts Capital Trio

Teamster Delegates From D. C. Refused Seats as Federation Heads Crush Revolt

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., May 16.—The Virginia State Federation of Labor turned down three delegates from a Washington teamsters' union today after a two-day fight and then re-elected all members and executive board members without opposition.

An "anti-administration" bloc which announced last night that it would offer a full opposing slate failed to make any nominations after delegates from the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers Local No. 639 were rejected by a roll call vote of 130 to 89.

W. D. Anderson, of Richmond, a leader of the opposition, and most of the group, however, walked out of the convention hall in a body after the election.

Some members of the revolting group said they would protest the conduct of the convention to the American Federation of Labor and demand a special convention

Slate Is Re-Elected

The re-elected slate includes O. C. Moore, Norfolk, president; John A. Titmus, Petersburg, vice president; E. J. Shave, Hampton, secretary-treasurer, and Vernon Marsh, Alexandria; J. D. Rapp, Clifton Forge; Lew Rogers, Danville; Mrs. S. D. Clinebell, Lynchburg; Joseph Rossano, Portsmouth; R. E. Woody, Richmond, and E. B. Brown, Roanoke, members of the executive board.

The election itself was routine after the opposition bloc decided to abandon any plans of making a further fight for control of the convention.

Implied Threat Hit

The convention adopted a score of resolutions among which was one "condemning" a statement which the federation said was made by Lee Long, vice president of the Clinchfield Coal Corporation, before a Virginia Chamber of Commerce dinner in Washington.

Declaring newspaper accounts of the statement quoted Long as telling Gov. Price that "unless the State could give us protection we would have to take matters into our own hands," the resolution said "we thoroughly condemn and deplore the implied and direct threats as stated by the nonunion coal operator."

The convention also called for enactment of State laws paralleling the Federal wage-hour and national labor relations acts; urged enactment of a State "anti-injunction" law because of use of this legal process in some labor disputes and provision for setting up a steam boiler inspection system under the direction of a State boiler inspector.

Curley Club Gives Archbishop $747 Check For Parochial High School Scholarships

At the annual meeting of the Curley Club last night in the Continental Hotel. Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, was presented a $747 check to provide parochial school scholarships. Left to right—Archbishop Curley, Miss Mary McGee, founder of the club, and Miss Dorothy Barrett, president Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, was entertained last night by 130 admirers at the Continental Hotel and received from them a check for $747 to provide scholarships in parochial high schools. Host was the Curley Club.

Praising the club for furthering Catholic education, the Archbishop declared "every feature of your work is to me this evening a thing of joy." Accepting the token the club offered him, he turned the check over to the club's treasury and offered to add to the sum if it wasn't enough.

The Rev. Francis J. Kelly, chaplain of the club and assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church, thanked Archbishop Curley for his kindness in annually visiting the club. Praising the club's moral tone, he reported that one member, Ann Kirley, had become a nun and devoted her life to work among lepers of the Samoan Islands.

Miss M. L. McGee, founder of the Curley Club made the speech of welcome.

Miss Barrett announced that 60 new members in the last year had raised the membership to 215, of which 145 were women.

Urging the club to be "selective" in its membership, Archbishop Curley urged that only those be admitted who have the "intangible qualities that go to make up what is called character. I thank God that in the club we have just that," he added.

G-Men Begin Hunt for 2 in Poison Ring

Hoover Agrees to Seek Missing Pair but Won't Take Part in Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 16.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation was asked by Judge Harry S. McDevitt late today to apprehend a man and a woman wanted in the widening investigation of the Eastern mass murder ring. It was the first assignment given the FBI in the case.

Some Philadelphia investigators have expressed hope the Government would join them while others want to "go it alone." In receiving the communication from Judge McDevitt, A. Bernard Leckie, of the Philadelphia FBI office, declared:

"Let me make it clear that we are not investigating the murder ring. We are only trying to help local officers bring back some persons who are missing."

Judge McDevitt said the warrants were for:

Mrs. Rose Carina, accused of participation in at least one poison death of the total that may reach 100. She had been called a "lure" for the ring.

Dominic Rodio, named as an accessory in the drowning of Joseph Arena at Sea Isle City, N. J.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt charged Mrs. Carina killed Peter Stea for insurance. He said Stea's body contained traces of two kinds of poison.

On another front of the far-reaching inquiry, Coroner Charles H. Hersch announced the bodies of two more men had been removed from graves to determine whether they had been slain.

Poison traces have been discovered in at least six exhumed bodies.

Investigators contend more violent methods—fake accidents and even sluggings—were used in the ring's wholesale "slay for pay" business.

The bodies dug up today were those of Antonio Giacobbe and Abraham Sherman. Their widows are held.

Judge McDevitt's request that the FBI arrest fugitives capped an appeal in which he urged J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau, to make "a personal survey of this unbelievable crime syndicate."

"No one can estimate the number of crimes committed to date or the ramification of the heinous murderers," the judge told Hoover in a telegram.

Persistent reports of a rift between police investigators and members of the prosecuting staff brought a denial from Judge McDevitt. He said there were "no differences."

Federal Agent Leckie said he had communicated with Hoover and he had authorized assistance in apprehension of fugitives, but that the FBI would leave actual investigation to Philadelphia police.

In One More Day Circus Resumes Its Vagabondage

The "Greatest Show on Earth" strikes its 41 tents tonight, after the last performance of a three-day stand, and moves out of Washington which Ringling Brothers and Barnum Bailey's Circus has always found a good show town.

Again last night the show played to a large audience and there will be performances this afternoon and tonight.

The United States park police yesterday received warm praise from the circus officials for their handling of traffic and other details about the lot. These policemen are assigned to this duty because the circus lot is on Federal property.

Many circus fans yesterday sought out one of the most interesting places on the lot—the mess hall, where the circus troupe, in entirety, have free meals. The hall is a series of joined tents, run by a steward and by 24 chefs. The menu changes daily as in any restaurant. Three meals are served on the long tables with red-checked tablecloths.

PRESIDENT'S SON: Don Zelaya, son of former Nicaraguan President Jose Zelaya, will join the Shoreham revue today. This afternoon he will meet President Somoza, his father's old friend (just returned from New York) at the Nicaraguan Legation. In his own right, Don Zelaya is well known as a stage star. His advent in the Blue Room will lend added zest to an already zestful show including the gay magico-dancing of Sonya and Romero, Marian Wilkins' waltz moods and Jerry Junkin's barytoning.

JITTERBUG CIRCUS: Laugh carnival of the year is that concluding jitterbug dance of Lotus' Muriel girls.

Best jitter dance of the year is the "Harlem carioca" of Federico and Jeannette. They had the floor smoking. Even the waiters were a-dither with enthusiasm. And when waiters get steamed up about an act, it has to be something terrific. Grand xylophoning by Grant Mason, too. One of the finest shows in months.

ECHO'S GOOD WEATHER: A 'swingster's paradise" is the Spanish Garden at Glen Echo. The air's full always of the hot rhythms of Cecil Golly's band, but country breezes keep the ballroom cool on hot evenings, while on cool or rainy evenings it can be closed against Jr Man Weather.

MARVEL IN BAMBOO: If a deaf and dumb boy who dances solo isn't a miracle—well, then you tell us one. Marvel, the deaf mute lad, now dancing at Bamboo Gardens, does splendid toe dancing and Russian spin numbers—depending entirely for his tempo upon the sight of Eddie Sauerwald's baton. Brilliant dancing also by the Rodgers (see picture above), colorful ensembles by the Versatiles. P. S. Bamboo's Monday night show was panicked by 19-month Theda Fulton, visiting with her parents. Theda danced with the line girls, played the piano, helped Al Norton with his emceeing. It was all her own idea. And more fun!

SHORT STORIES: Hi Hat's singer, Angie Rodante, goes a-dancing with "Chuck" Palmer, of the Red Jackets. That was Angie and "Chuck" jitterbugging it on the Bamboo Gardens floor the other eve.

Peggy Townsend (Cafe Caprice) plans to take a short vacation pretty soon. She's going to visit up at Warrenton as the guest of Austine (Bootsie) McDonnell, society girl singer at the Pall Mall Room a couple of months ago.

Peter Borras, of the Madrillon, used to be a chef himself. If you can get Senor Borras to personally concoct some of Madrillon's afternoon "hot snacks"—you'll recognize the master's touch.

New policy at Dick's (host to the theater crowd). All listed drinks only a tiny t o bits from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Bill Monroe, smart mixter in the Uptwon (home of the double cocktail) tells us that folks are ordering more fancy drinks than they did a few months ago, also that there's a trend away from Scotch and in favor of American rye and bourbon.

71 in D. C. Area Get Reserve Commissions

Young Have Been Attending Night School in Last Year

The War Department yesterday issued commissions in the Reserve Corps to 71 local young men who have been attending a special night school conducted by the Army during the last year.

Products of a new system of developing the additional Reserve officers required under the Army expansion program, the men have been taking an intensive course during recent months consisting of drills and lectures two nights a week, correspondence courses and Sunday target practice. Most of the group had no previous military training but had some experience in procurement work or other quartermaster duties.

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1939 19

Bridges Shackles Nats as Tigers Win, 6 to 2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Buck Newsom hasn't changed much. He's wearing a new uniform, of course, but that's traditional with Buck, who apparently can pitch himself into a new ball club whenever he takes the notion. But the bluster, the showmanship and the native gustiness is constant with him. In the uniform of the Tigers, he's the same showboat guy who served with the Nats, the Red Sox and the Browns.

POVICH

He hadn't changed much as far as Washington fans could see yesterday when, midway during the game at Griffith Stadium, the loud-speakers announced "Newsom will pitch for the Tigers tomorrow." The boos provoked by that announcement were still thick when big Buck vaulted out of the Tigers' dugout, whirled his cap in the air and bowed in mock gratitude.

Down in the sweaty confines of the Tigers' dressing room after the game, Buck was holding a crumpled clipping and orating about Oscar Vitt, manager of the Cleveland Indians, who, it seems had been talking for publication in words that weren't flattering to Buck.

Nobody laughed except Newsom, so big Buck frowned a bit. "Vitt's sore," said Newsom. "He wanted to get me for the Indians and when he couldn't do it, he starts making nasty cracks. Vitt, of all people."

What did Buck mean, Vitt of all people?

Vitt Has No Squawk, According to Buck

"After the job he did with the Cleveland Indians last year, he shouldn't squawk at anybody. Why, I could have managed the Cleveland club better by telephone from St. Louis, than Vitt did from the Cleveland bench. He botched a pretty good ball team with his fancy management. And I helped him—don't forget that. Those five times I licked the Indians last season didn't help Vitt any.

"I guess that's what he's sore about. I lick 'em five times and now he's around telling reporters I can't win for a good club. How does Vitt know? I've never been with a good club yet, and that goes for the Browns and Washington and the Red Sox. Watch me with these Tigers."

At that point, in an obvious effort to impress his new pals, Buck was raising his voice at bit, but he had something else he wanted to say about Vitt.

"When that Cleveland owner was out in California looking for a new manager a couple of years ago, why did he sign Vitt? He could have signed Charley McCarthy. Charley was out there in California, too, and the Indians wouldn't have had Vitt's thinking to contend with."

On the other side of the Tigers' dressing room another former Brown was swabbing himself down in the shower. He virtually rode into the Tiger's fold on the coat-tails of Newsom, who was the chief excuse for last week-end's 10-player deal. He was Red Kress, getting a break at last, in the big leagues.

Kress Should Be a Favorite Character

A week ago Kress was a member of the lowly Browns, but he wasn't playing regularly. His failure to get off to a good start at bat had put him on the bench and he was in some disrepute with a club that wasn't going anywhere, anyway. The Browns were in the midst of a fetish for young blood and the minors were beckoning Kress again.

Because Mr. Walter O. Briggs, rich owner of the Tigers, admired Newsom's pitching and caused Manager Del Baker to attempt a deal for big Buck, Kress finds himself with the Tigers. The Newsom trade could not be swung until it blossomed as a 10-player deal and thus it was that Kress was included. And with the Tigers, Kress is being received as a regular. Manager Del Baker has seemingly soured on his rookie shortstop, Frank Croucher.

To this department, Kress will always be a favorite character, figuring as he did in one of the few truly romantic chapters of baseball. Let's turn back the clock to a July afternoon in 1936.

Red Kress reported to the ball park that afternoon for a double-header with Cleveland. On his way to the Nats' dressing room, he was hailed into Clark Griffith's office. He needn't dress, Griffith told him. He was being released that day to Chattanooga.

Sadly, Kress made his way to his Washington apartment. The bitter realization that he had been tabbed a flop in the majors (no club had signed him) was not his only pain. There was yet the task of breaking the news to Mrs. Kress and their small daughter.

Well, three hours later, a telephone rang in the Kress apartment. It was Edward B. Eynon, jr., in a hurried voice. He wanted Red to come back to Griffith Stadium. Buddy Myer had been banished from the first game of the double-header and the Nats were short of infielders.

Kress hurried back to the ball park. He got into that second game. And he walked out of the park that evening still a big leaguer. You couldn't release a guy who had just made five hits in five times at bat.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Clark Griffith, who has been around for a good portion of the first 100 years of baseball, believes that the chief changes in the game for the next century will be the improvement in the average ball player, the development of a new pitching formula, and concessions to the weather.

CONSIDINE

The veteran owner of the Nats, who has meant more to baseball than most of the human relics in baseball's hall of fame, is content that the improvement in the skill of the players is inevitable, even though millions of American kids are turning each year to the more effete sports of golf and tennis.

"We learn a little about baseball every year," the old guy said. "Little new things that we never think about, but which amount up to something in the end. We get better equipment to play with, better fields, and better-trained athletes. If Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb or Hans Wagner could be reborn in a hundred years they'd still be stars—probably great stars. But a lot of players who hold jobs today, and do pretty good, wouldn't be able to make some of those teams of the future.

Another Great Mechanical Change to Come

"That would be true of the average big leaguer of 50 years ago, if he tried to get into baseball today. He wouldn't be good enough, wouldn't be fast enough, and couldn't think fast enough."

The next great mechanical change in the game, Griffith believes, will be the pitchers' use of a full swinging step before he digs in and throws the ball. Griffith tried to get this rule through at the last winter meeting, but the American League owners balked him. The National League owners were all in favor of it. In fact they invited Griffith—the most bristling critic of the senior circuit—into their solemn council hall to explain the stepping pitch to them.

Griffith sees coming generations of players taking readily to the "walking start." He doesn't believe that the current crop, except the extreme youngsters, will adopt it—even when it becomes official, as it unquestionably will. The old boy thinks this pitch, which gives a man momentum will be the perfect gift to old line fans who pine for the pitchers' battles of old—and that it won't curdle the disciples of slugging. Griffith thinks the current baseball is here for a good hundred years. It is as lively as it was when it was called the rabbit ball, but it's raised seams, and the impending "walking start," will promote some return to the pitching mastery of old.

The country's swing away from day-time entertainment will bring night ball to many more cities, says Griffith, who is a wordy foe of night ball. "I won't have night ball in my own ball park because it isn't good enough yet," he snorted. "But in the years to come they'll perfect it. No doubt of that. Right now I think even the best of the lighted parks are a miserable imitation of good daylight baseball. But there's no stopping it.

Night Baseball Here to Stay

"Take St. Louis for instance. Who wants to see a ball game on a hot afternoon there? Yet they turn people away from that municipal opera at night. The same is true in a lot of other places. The Southern League, for instance, will be strictly a night ball league pretty soon.

"If you ask me," the old man swore, "I know where Hades is. It starts in Kansas City, runs under the St. Louis park and then cuts South."

Griffith looked so far into the future that he foresaw the possibility of an eventual world series between the Browns and Phillies. "Why not?" The old man demanded. "Baseball revolves on a big wheel. One time you're down and another time you're up, and sooner or later you're going to be up."

The labor pains that are shooting through the remainder of America's industries will never hit baseball, Griffith thinks. "I was a ring leader in the last real effort to unionize the game," he recalled. "Back in 1900. I was vice president of the Players Protective Association. Got all hot and bothered about standardized wages for ball players, so one day I asked Sam Gompers—the biggest labor man of the day—to come over and give us a talk. I figured he'd be all in favor of our plan.

"Well, he said we were fools to think about ever standardizing baseball salaries, as much as he himself might have wanted it done. I remember he said 'do you think an $8,000 a year ball player will ever go on strike as a means of getting $40,000 for another player?' No—that's one thing you won't see in the next 100 years—labor trouble."

He thinks that with the adoption of the rule prohibiting an outfielder from deliberately dropping a fly, to try for a double play, the baseball rules are now okay for all time. Also good until your century plant blooms again are the admission prices. He bit the end off a cigar and demanded tartly "name me another sport where you can get a load of the world's best—for 50 cents."

Detroit Ace Drives In 3 Runs to Assure 5th Straight Victory; Nat's 3d Loss in Row

By Shirley Povich.

Coming from behind, seventh place overtook the Nats yesterday, claiming the Washington club for its very own. Coincidentally, the Nats acquired their third straight defeat—a 6-to-2 job cleverly worked out by Tommy Bridges and the Detroit Tigers.

The venerable Mr. Bridges, seeking his fifth straight victory, didn't experience much trouble achieving it. He yielded a run to the Nats in the first inning and another run to the Nats in the sixth, and that's all there was. At the finish, Bridges had pitched nine-hit ball.

There was only one consolation for the Nats. Those two runs they did score were the most any club has scored against Bridges this season. But two runs were not enough for Joe Krakauskas to work with in the state in which the Tigers found him yesterday.

The Tigers were not exactly stymied by Krakauskas. They whacked him for 13 hits and scored in five of the nine innings. Charley Gehringer, Rudy York and Red Kress fattened their batting averages with a pair of hits each, and so did Bridges.

Bats in Three Runs

The Detroit pitcher was causing the Nats great pain both while he was on the mound and at bat. He slapped a two-bagger into right field to drive two runs across the plate in the fifth inning and in the ninth he personally produced his third run of the day by beating out a surprise squeeze bunt.

At the outset it was all very misleading, what with the Nats matching a run the Tigers had scored in the first inning. Buddy Lewis slapped a two-bagger into leftfield and Taft Wright scored him with a single to center. But the second Washington run was a long time developing.

It didn't develop, in fact, until the sixth inning, when with two out, Wright, Myer and Travis banged consecutive singles into centerfield and caused some commotion in the Detroit bull pen. But Bridges survived nicely by striking out Sammy West, and as a rebuke to the Nats in the next inning he struck three of 'em out.

Successive Doubles

Krakauskas was knocked loose from a run in the first inning when Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg swatted a pair of two-baggers, and in the fourth the Tigers as-

Boston, on Rampage, Gets 19 Hits Against Chisox; Woody Rich Wins Third Game of Season; Doerr Hits Homer

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 16.—The Red Sox celebrated their return to Fenway Park today by going on a 19-hit rampage that overwhelmed the Chicago White Sox, 18 to 4, and gave Freshman Pitcher Woody Rich his third triumph of the season.

Every member of the Boston team hit safely against the Chicago pitching, supplied by Johnny Rigney, Vic Frasier and Art Herring. Lou Finney, filling in at first base for Jimmy Foxx, hospitalized with sinus trouble, was one of the four Red Sockers to bang out three hits. Finney made his Boston debut in home team regalia an eventful one by lashing out two doubles and a single. Bobby Doerr drove out his second homer of the season with one aboard in the second inning.

Rich held the Chisox to six hits and all but 1 of their runs were unearned. Jim Tabor's wild throw in the third set the stage for their 3-run rally that tied the score. A 5-run blast in the third, followed by a 7-run uprising in the fifth, crushed the fight out of the visitors.

Rookie Masterson To Face Newsom

Eighteen-year-old Walter Masterson, whose big league experience totals two innings, will go to the mound today against the Detroit Tigers at Griffith Stadium.

Rookie Masterson, who will be starting his first big league game, will be opposed by Buck Newsom, who will be making his pitching debut for the Tigers.

Manager Bucky Harris, admitting he is desperate for pitchers, decided on Masterson's nomination for a starting role after the Nats had lost their third straight yesterday.

"I don't know how far Masterson will go," said Harris, "but I'm hopeful. It's asking a lot of a kid, but I have faith in him. The only pitcher I have who stopped the Tigers is Joe Haynes, and he's ill. Dutch Leonard hasn't fully recovered yet, but he'll be standing by if Masterson needs help."

Reliance Life Ten Beats Variety Club

Cox Practicing Daily for 4-Ball Match Sunday

Wiffy Cox, Congressional mentor, is working hard on his game, practicing and playing daily, for the match Sunday at Congressional when he and Jimmy Thomson meet the four-ball champions and greatest golfers in the world today, Ralph Guldahl and Sammy Snead.

Cox played at Chevy Chase yesterday, and is anxious to get in shape and pair with Thomson to hand the champs one of their few defeats.

The match itself is running secondary in interest to the driving contest between Snead and Thomson that will precede the exhibition. It should settle in the minds of the local fans which is the longer of the two, as they are going to hit several balls apiece.

Guldahl and Snead are also expected to crack the 70-mark, as the course is in very good condition and fit for scoring.

Jack Redmond, trick-shot artist, will give a show before the match, that will start at 2 p. m. Guldahl is playing an exhibition in Baltimore Saturday, with Cox, and will be here on Saturday, as will Snead. It is the first local appearance for the latter and first since his Open triumphs for Guldahl.

Four Baggers Account For 6 St. Louis Runs; N. Y. Boots Game Away

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 16 (AP).—The Cardinals had to come from behind today to nip the New York Giants, 7 to 6, in the opening game of their home stand and boost their National League lead to a game and a half.

The Giants worked hard to boot this one, but they finally accomplished it after kicking away a five-run lead they had piled up in the first three frames. The defeat dropped Bill Terry's troupe into seventh place in the league standings.

The "meat balls" served by Harry Gumbert and Cliff Melton to Johnny Mize, Ducky Medwick and Pepper Martin were all belted for homers and produced six of the Cards' seven runs. The winning marker came home in the seventh on a walk, Melton's error, an infield out and Lynn Myers' pinch-single.

Tribe Scores 5 Runs in 10th, Beats A's in Night Game, 8-3

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 16.—It took the Cleveland Indians nine innings to solve the floodlights tonight in the American League's first nocturnal baseball game, and in the tenth they cleaned up five runs for an 8-to-3 decision over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Two walks and a bunt filled the bases for Cleveland in the big tenth. Jeff Heath, Indian leftfielder, doubled to right, scoring Roy Weatherly and Frank Pytlak. Bruce Campbell hit to Joe Gantenbein, who threw too late to get Hal Trosky at the plate. It was a fielder's choice. Campbell stole second. Keltner singled, scoring Heath and sending Campbell to third. Campbell scored when Shilling forced Ken Keltner and was thrown out at first. After Grimes had walked, Humphries, up for the second time in the inning, struck out, making it three.

It looked like anybody's ball game for seven innings, with homers by Hal Trosky and Frankie Hayes. The Athletics stepped into a 3-to-1 lead. The Indians tied it up in the eighth

Baltimorean Takes State Tourney Medal

Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg Has 85 in Maryland Play; Field of 41 One of Smallest in History; Mrs. L. G. Pray 2d With 86; Mrs. Sloman, 87

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Baltimore came through after four lean years in the Maryland State women's championship as Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore Country Club, topped the District's all-star delegation with a medal winning score of 85 yesterday at Congressional.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, was second in the field of 41, one of the smallest in the history of the event, with an 86, that was in turn a single shot better than the two-time finalist, Mrs. Jerome Sloman, Suburban.

Mrs. Schluderberg, former Baltimore C. C. champion and one of the Monumental City's top golfers for several years, was out in 45, in trouble on the second and fifth where she was two over par on each, but returned in 40, with nothing over a five on her card, and a deuce on the fourteenth, where she dropped a 5-footer. The medalist finished with a regulation four for the victory.

Locals Qualify

All of the local linkswomen, who were figured to qualify easily, made the grade, but the scores were higher than expected. The only former champion in the field, Mrs. Betty Meckley, had 88; Marion Brown, cofavorite, had 89; Mrs. Myron Davy, 90; Mrs. Walter Stokes, 88, and Mrs. Leo Walper, Mrs. Landra Platt and Louise Claytor, all 91.

Scores of 98 tied for the top flight, with Mrs. C. D. Warfield, Green Spring Valley, and Mrs. R. L. Rose, of the host club, winning the places with 6 and 7, respectively, while Mrs. George Goetzmann, Congressional, and Mrs. Hugh Rowan, Chevy Chase, lost out with 8. They went into the second flight.

First Nine Tartar

The long, par 37, first nine proved the tartar of the day's play, only Mrs. Pray, with a consistent 42, and Louise Claytor, with 44, breaking the 45 mark. Mrs. Walter Stokes, the medalist, and Mrs. Sloman each had 40 on the back nine. Mrs. Stokes played the par 3 holes in 1

Spiders Defeat Indians, Win Title

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 16.—Richmond's Spiders won the State baseball championship for the fourth time in the last five years today by defeating William and Mary, 6 to 5, in their final game of the season.

Porter Vaughan, Richmond's crack southpaw, held the Indians to three hits, one a triple by Chestnut. It was his second victory of the year over the Indians, who broke the Spiders' string of diamond titles in 1938.

Jefferson High Beats Briarley, 6-5

Though it led for the first seven innings, Jefferson High baseball team, of Falls Church, was forced to scramble for its second victory of the year yesterday, 6-5. After Briarley Military Academy had scored three times in the eighth to knot the count, Jefferson batsmen pounded across the wining run. Pitcher McNab, of Jefferson, allowed 9 hits to the 13 issued by Briarley's Lodge.

Tiger Official, Landis to Confer On 'Farm' Probe

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 16.—Jack Zeller, general manager of the Detroit Tigers, will confer tomorrow with Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis on various phases of an investigation of the Tigers' minor league farm operations.

Farm operations of the club have been under scrutiny of the commissioner's office for two weeks or more. Leslie O'Connor, Landis' secretary, said tonight he could not say when the investigation would be completed.

Detroit has connections with Toledo, of the American Association, and Beaumont, of the Texas League.

Commissioner Landis, after an investigation of farms in the St. Louis Cards' chain a year ago, declared almost 100 minor leaguers free agents and assessed fines totaling $2,176 against six clubs.

Weir, Toronto, Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Game, Beats Orioles

Former Bees Pitcher Wins 8-0 Victory

170-Pound Hurler Allows Four Walks, And Strikes Out Six In Near Perfect Tilt

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, May 16.—Bill Weir, 26-year-old southpaw, formerly of the Boston Bees, turned in the International League's first no-hit, no-run pitching performance of the season today in hurling the Toronto Maple Leafs to an 8-to-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The 170-pounder from Melrose, Mass., an alumnus of the University of New Hampshire, walked four opponents and struck out six in coming through with the no-hitter.

Weir was with the Bees in 1937 and part of 1938 before going to Toronto. He is a native of Portland, Me.

In addition to the four walks, two Baltimore players reached base on errors, Howell, when Catcher Harshany tipped his bat in the fourth, and West when Clifton fumbled in the seventh. Howell was rubbed out stealing and West was eliminated in a double play.

Tiger Rookie Safe at Third on Lead End of Double Steal

Ben McCosky, Detroit's sensational yearling outfielder, slides into third base after working a double steal with Fox in the fourth inning of the game with the Nats yesterday. Trying to put the ball on him is Buddy Lewis sumed a 2-1 lead on a gift run. It was the gift of Buddy Myer, who bobbled Kress' grounder. A sacrifice and singles by McCosky and Fox scored Kress.

As a precautionary measure, the Tigers came up with two runs in the fifth to make it 4-1. Bell and Kress delivered a pair of singles and with two out, Bridges got the runs for himself. He lined a ball into right field that slithered out of Taft Wright's glove in a near-shoestring catch attempt, and it evolved as a double that scored both Bell and Kress.

Then there was that run the Tigers scored in the ninth after Krakauskas had pitched a single and hit Bell with a pitched ball. After a sacrifice had moved the pair to second and third, Krakky intentionally passed Kress. At this point Bridges sort of shocked Krakky with a squeeze bunt and before Krakky recovered from his surprise, a run was across and the bases were still filled. A double play finally stopped the Tigers.

Krakauskas made two of the Nats' eight hits, but summed up, his efforts were no great asset. Krakky was no asset, particularly in the third inning when, after beating out a hit, he stood idly around in the vicinity of first base and permitted Hank Greenberg to make an unassisted double play on George Case's grounder. Greenberg tagged Case and then he tagged Krakky, who was so absorbed by the proceedings he neither ran to second or stayed on first.

Wrestling Card Is Complete; Pencheff Will Meet Singh

Rounding up only topnotch performers, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday turned up with four interesting supporting bouts for the feature world's championship wrestling match between Jimmy Londos, the titleholder, and Jack Hader, the Kansas "villain," tomorrow night at Turner's Arena.

Outstanding in the supporting cast is George Pencheff, the whirlwind Australian champion, who will engage Nanjo Singh, the Hindu creator of the "cobra death lock." They will mix in a 30-minute semiwindup.

Dr. Dropkick Murphy dropkicks at Abe (King Kong) Kashey, the Syrian giant; Sammy Stein, the Jewish star, returns to oppose Gene Bowman, young Texan, and Rosy Red Ryan takes on Jim Clinstock.

Hader will be meeting Londos for the first time, and though he always is the target for the jeers, the cheers tomorrow night will be for the Kansan. Things are such that fans would like to see a new champion.

Ambassador Natators Lose To Shoreham

Shoreham Hotel completed its demonstration of superiority over rivals from the Ambassador Hotel last night, when its mermen defeated the downtowners, 37 to 27, at Shoreham in the final of a two-meet series.

The feature of last night's meet was the thrilling finish in the 200-yard free style won by Bob Bamman, of Shoreham, over Gus McKenna, of Ambassador. Bamman defeated his keen rival by a fingernail.

Bamman also took second in the 100-yard backstroke to place behind Neil Swann as Shoreham's leading point getter. Swann annexed the 50 and 100-yard free-style events.

Central's Nine Wins Over Charlotte M.A.

Mt. Pleasanters Repeat Earlier Victory as Kligman Gives 4 Hits

Central High's baseball team took its second victory of the season yesterday from Charlotte Hall Military Academy, 12 to 2, as two Cadet hurlers gave up 15 hits. Charley Kligman threw four-hit ball for seven innings, and allowed Ken Bransdorf, an All-High catcher, to try his hand in the final two periods. The latter issued three safeties.

Scoring a brace of runs in the first and third innings, Central went out in front and stayed there. It reached a peak in the eighth with four tallies, allowing the Cadets their only two runs due to a letdown in the eighth; Jello Lagos, with a triple and two singles in five times up, was the star. Lyons sparked the weak punch of the Cadets.

By Bill Burnett

Taking sweet and complete revenge for a 4-2 beating at Anacostia's hands in the season's inter-high baseball inaugural, Eastern's White Tide broke over the little Indians yesterday, winning a startling 16-to-3 ball game as well as a deadlock for first place in the East division with its victim.

As expected, Western took another decision from Wilson in the West division, 12 to 7. The slugging bee, staged at Western, put the winner within hailing distance of Roosevelt's division leaders and Wilson dropped completely out of title consideration with its loss.

Anacostia's glowing chance to lock up the East title was muffed in yesterday's game. The 12 hits Eastern slammed off the offerings of Art Faircloth and Jack Burroughs helped to muff it, but ten assorted errors did their little part. James (Puddin') Lovett, stocky righthander of the Tide, was touched for five scattered hits in seven innings, and his relief, Warren Earhardt, was stingy enough not to allow any.

What really beat the Anacostians, however, was a grounder, hit by Joe Cole in the third inning, which bounced crazily over the mound, sailed over Shortstop Seaman's head and wound up in centerfield. Bob Gordon finally managed to field it, but his peg to third hit Cole and the latter scored as the ball bounced under Anacostia's bench.

That series of bounces scored two runs, putting Eastern out in front by 2-1. From there in, Anacostians made error after error, while Eastern increased its lead. The sixth saw seven Eastern runs come in.

The Western-Wilson fray, also a free-hitting affair, was slightly closer at least. Western, behind Johnny Burke, rolled up a 5-0 lead in its first three sessions, but Wilson managed to knit it up at 6-6 in the fifth with three in that inning and three in the last half of the third. A four-run orgy by Western in the sixth, featured by Hal Mitchell's double, put the game on ice.

Though Burke was master of the situation for his four innings of work—he gave up only three hits—he gave way first to Nimnon and then Nance and the trio was charged with only eight hits.

Two Plays at Third as Eastern Trounces Anacostia in High Series

On one of the strangest plays of a strange ball game, Eastern's Galasso slid into third (lower photo) in the third inning of the Tide's 16-3 drubbing of Anacostia yesterday, a relay from Outfielder Gordon bounced off his shoulder, and he got up to score Eastern's first run. In the second period, however, the winners weren't so lucky Paul Cohill (upper photo) was forced out at third when Art Faircloth took "Puddin'" Lovett's grounder and threw to Lambert Anderson

D. C. Horses Off to Good Start In 5-Day Atlantic City Show

Greenhalgh's Sally Port Wins Hunter Class, With Illuminator 2d and Dress Rehearsal 3d

By Anne Hagner.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 16.—Representatives from Washington stables made a brilliant start in the opening session of the five-day horse show which was held in the auditorium here this evening when Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's good looking brown mare, Sally Port, triumphed over a classy field of hunters in the limit class. Second to Sally Port was Alvin Untermyer's Illuminator, and third was another Washington entry, Dress Rehearsal, owned by Capt. Henri Luebbermann.

It was feared early today that Dress Rehearsal would have to be scratched from the hunter classes because of a big knee, but the swelling reduced enough for Capt. Luebbermann's chestnut to place in his class.

The Atlantic City Auditorium, which is decorated like a Southern garden for the occasion, is noted chiefly for its size. A paddock, a large show ring, and an outside hunter course are all on the same level as the stables and the lower boxes. The seating capacity, which is 41,000, was not seriously taxed as a light crowd gathered for the opening classes, but the committee is prepared for big things on succeeding days.

In addition to the hunters and jumpers, which are of greatest interest to the District contingent, are classes for hackney's and for three and five gaited saddle horses. To date the hit of the show is the 3-day-old hackney pony colt in the barn of Judy King, prominent exhibitor from Atlanta, Ga.

The Randle, Greenhalgh, and Whitney stables swing into heavy action tomorrow afternoon in the hunter division and the open jumpers will see action in the $1,000 Marlborough-Blenheim stake.

Wilson Nine Beats Eagles 2d Time, 12-10

Gaw's Hit Decides Game in Tenth; A. U. Tied It in 9th

Wilson Teachers College won its second extra-inning victory of the season over American University's nine yesterday when Gaw's double scored Lewis with the decisive run in the tenth inning of their game at A. U. The score was 12 to 11. Wilson took the first game between the schools, 5 to 4.

Wilson overcame a 6-0 A. U. lead in the third and forged ahead for the first time in the eighth at 11 to 10. The Eagles deadlocked the count in the ninth on a walk, a sacrifice and two infield outs.

But then came the tenth.

Landon Winner Over St. Albans

Its second straight victory, after losing the season's first three games, was won yesterday by Landon School when it staved off a late rally of St. Albans and took a 9-to-6 decision. Five runs scored in the eighth inning put Landon in a 9-2 lead, seemingly good enough for the game. But the Saints made one last try to get in the game. They tallied four times, three off Hannon's double, but the rally died there. Dave Maloney got credit for the game, allowing only six hits.

Terps Defeat Lafayette Nine, 10 to 6

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Easton, Pa., May 16.—Maryland brought an end to Lafayette's winning streak, leaving it at eight in a row today as the Terrapins scored a 10-6 victory.

Taking advantage of Lafayette's misplays the visitors came from behind to register over Glenn Young, star sophomore lefthander, who gave up 12 hits, fanned 7 and walked 3.

Mondorff, the winning hurler, went the route, although he was in trouble on several occasions. He gave up ten safeties, struck out five and walked four.

Five Errors

Five Lafayette errors gave the visitors three runs in the fourth and two more in the ninth. The Maroon earned all of its tallies.

A single by Bellis and Toohey's triple gave Lafayette two runs in the first and they added one more on singles by Dochterman, Farinon and Young in the second after doubles by Keller and Johnson had given the Terrapins a run in the same frame.

The Terrapin battering ram went to work in the third when Knepley hit a ponderous poke into deep center for a four-base blow and Bengoechae and Johnson added singles and Keller hit his second double to give Maryland two runs to tie the count.

Take Lead in Fourth

Maryland forged ahead in the fourth with three tallies on two errors and singles by Bengoechae and Keller and rang up two more in each of the eighth and ninth while all Lafayette could glean from Mondorff's delivery were single counters in the fourth, seventh and eighth. One of these was a four-base blow by Dochterman, who led Lafayette at bat with a single, triple and home run in three official trips to the plate.

It was the third defeat for Lafayette this season. The Maroons had previously dropped contests to Prince and Massachusetts State.

G.W. Freshmen Beat Terps, 13-3

The George Washington University freshman baseball team avenged an earlier loss to Maryland's yearlings at College Park yesterday by shellacking two Little Terrapin pitchers for 13 hits and a 13-3 victory. It was the final game of the season for the young Colonials, who were resuming baseball after a lapse of one year. They compiled a record of eight victories and four losses.

Frank McGinnis pitched the full nine innings for G. W. and held the hard-hitting Marylanders to seven hits. He lost a shutout in the fourth when a walk and three successive singles pushed over all of the Terps' runs.

St. Albans Varsity And Juniors Win

The St. Albans varsity and junior varsity tennis teams were victorious over Landon Prep teams at St. Albans yesterday. The varsity won, 3—2, and the junior varsity scored, 6½—4½, in a match in which there were several split points because of the hurry to finish before darkness.

Navy Yard Tennis Team Defeated, 3-2

Navy Yard tennis team defeated last year's Departmental champions, Treasury, by a score of 3 to 2 yesterday. Lieut Farrin and Lieut. Howard featured the five doubles matches with a 6—0, 6—3 triumph over Botts and Nolan. Treasury's only victories were registered by Coe-Chamberlain and Ford-LaCoke.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,
(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Outfielder Taft Wright was the outstanding performer for the Nats in their defeat by the Tigers yesterday and thus moves into the lead in the Man of the Month contest. The 10 points on the basis of yesterday's game are distributed as follows:

To Wright, four points, because he made two of the Nats' hits, Drove home their first run, and figured in the only other run they scored.

To Cecil Travis, three points, because he made two of the Nats' hits in three times at bat, and because he batted in a run. The totals:

Woody English Sold by Cubs To St. Louis Cards

Chicago, May 16 (AP).—Elwood (Woody) English, veteran utility infielder, was sold today by the Chicago Cubs to the St. Louis Cardinals in a straight cash transaction in which no other players were involved.

English, who joined the Chicago Cubs in 1927, was a star with the team several years and one of the most popular players the club ever had. In December, 1936, he was traded, with Roy Henshaw, to Brooklyn for Infielder Linus Frey. Last July he was sold by Brooklyn to the Cincinnati Reds. He refused to report to the Reds, who sold him to the Cubs last February.

English has not been in the Cub line-up since the regular season started.

Dodgers Rout Cubs, 12 to 2

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 16.—Dizzy Dean, came back with a bang today, but he didn't get into the ball game in time to stop the unpredictable Dodgers of Brooklyn from walloping the Cubs, 12 to 2.

The Dodgers did all their scoring off Vance Page and Jack Russell in the first four frames, counting seven times in the first inning alone. Then Dizzy was called in for his first National League hurling appearance of the year and pitched three-hit scoreless ball through the last five frames. He faned five and walked none.

Dizzy's pitching job, although the outstanding development of the game, had to play second fiddle to that turned in by Whitey Wyatt, the Brooklyn's new right-hander, however. Whitey, going the route for his fourth straight win, tossed a four-hitter, faned eight and walked three. He didn't allow a hit until the sixth, when the Cubs scored their first run. Hank Leiber's homer in the ninth was the only other Chicago tally.

Three Yankee Homers Beat Browns, 7-5

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—The Yankees called on their old trade-mark, the home run, three times today to whip the St. Louis Browns, 7-5, in the opening tilt of their home stand and stretch their winning streak to six straight games.

Although each team made only eight hits, the Yankee homers accounted for six of their seven runs. Joe Gordon hit his fourth of the year in the second inning with the bags empty. George Selkirk connected for his fifth in the sixth heat with one on, and Babe Dahlgren belted his third in the eighth with two aboard. The only other Yankee run preceded Selkirk's clout in the sixth, coming on a single, a walk, an error.

Groucher's Boy And Happy Road Run Dead Heat In Seventh Race

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 16.—In a rip-snorting finish that would have made any track handicapper happy, Mrs. E. E. Black's Crossing Over stuck out her nose in the final jump and won a photo decision from Mrs. H. Simms' Rough Buddy. It was an 8-year-old mare hanging defeat on a 4-year-old gelding at the end of a battle over the 6½-furlong course, which served feature purposes on today's program.

Crossing Over, despite some busy campaigning, had been away from the winner's circle since early last summer and she had only a scattered backing abong the 5,000 fans who witnessed the sport under ideal conditions. The winner paid a $22.60 mutuel.

Truthfully, racing in the colors of L. K. Crist, was a slight favorite over Nathan Hale and Shanteb.

Those who bet the "3 and 3" combination in the daily double collected a $44.60 mutuels. Cat's Cradle won the second race to the delight of the favorite players and paid a $4.20 individual mutuel. In the third race and concluding half of the "double," Guinea Law led all the way to pay $10.

A dead heat and a claim of foul made today's seventh race a thriller. Mrs. G. H. Pearce's Happy Road and Dr. H. B. Landon's Groucher's Boy reached the wire as one in the mile and a sixteenth test. Locked in a duel from the top of the stretch, the two rivals finished with Happy Road hemmed in on the rail.

Jockey Johnny Shanks, Washington boy, claimed a foul against Jockey Woody Kirk, who rode Groucher's Boy. The foul was not allowed, but all hands appeared satisfied when both horses were declared winners. Happy Road paid $3.80 to win, $4.20 to place and 3.80 to show. Groucher's Boy paid $10.80 to win, $11.60 to place and $5.80 to show.

Crossing Over and Cat's Cradle Win in Close Finishes

Left—Mrs. E. E. Black's Crossing Over, a $22.60 shot with Jockey Herbie Lauch aboard, sticks her nose out to defeat Rough Buddy (No. 4). Shanteb (NO. 8) is third with Truthfully (No. 6) fourth. It was the finish of the Charles Town feature race. Right—Capt. Ewart Johnston's filly, Cat's Cradle (nearest rail), answering Jockey Buddy Root's urging to be the winner in a photo thriller. Blue Prelude (No. 2) is second. Cat's Cradle saved much ground entering the stretch to win under excellent handling

Chart of Charles Town Races

WEATHER, CLEAR; TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good for all but Lady Buck. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:32. Off 2:35½. Winner, R. F. Gillette's br. m. (5), by Beth's Rival—Kitty Cheatham. Trained by W. Royle. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
KITTY'S RIVAL	(Klein)	115	6	2	2h	2h	1h	$4.30

DILWIN	(Shanks)	115	7	7	7	7h	7h	33.30
GEE SHARP	(Everson)	110	2	5	8	8	8	37.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KITTY'S RIVAL, $10.60, $4.60, $3.00; LADY BUCK, $3.60, $2.60; NIGHT WATCH, $2.80.

KITTY'S RIVAL, forward factor from start, came with good energy when placed to drive to take command and held LADY BUCK safe. The latter, the best, dwelt at break, was rushed to contention between horses and was going fastest of all at end. NIGHT WATCH went evenly, but could not threaten seriously. GOOD GRACIOUS set a good pace to stretch and stopped badly. HASTY HANNA had early speed.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:11. Off 3:16. Winner, E. Johnston's b. f. (4), by Catalan—Lucy Grier. Trained by O. F. Kent. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50 4-5.

PEGADETTE	(Garrett)	115	5	6	5hk	7h	8	5.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAT'S CRADLE, $4.20, $3.00, $2.60; BLUE PRELUDE, $5.00, $3.40; CANTER BELLE, $7.80.

CAT'S CRADLE, hard ridden from break, saved ground at stretch turn and, under energetic handling, was up in concluding strides. BLUE PRELUDE was rushed to the front, set a good pace, but ran wide into stretch. CANTER BELLE lacked early speed and gained gradually throughout running. DIXIE S. was caught in a tangle directly after break and tired after reaching contention. ON SEA had speed to stretch and stopped.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:44. Off 3:46½. Winner, Mrs. W. Ashbridge's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GUINEA LAW, $10.00, $7.40, $5.40; JUSTA JIMMIE, $5.20, $3.60; SKY LASSIE, $5.80.

GUINEA LAW, in motion at break, was strong, shook off TOP SHELL to take clear lead and held JUSTA JIMMIE safe under strong handling. SKY LASSIE, outrun to stretch, closed full of run. TOP SHELL weakened from trying to catch GUINEA LAW in early stages. BORO POKER was in thick of contention to stretch and stopped. The others were not prominent.

Daily Double, Cat's Cradle and Guinea Law, Paid $44.60.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:04. Off 4:16. Winner, J. M. Trapnell's b. f. MIGHTY BUSY, last oft of gates, saved ground when outrun in early stages, gained sharply along backstretch and came to inside of HOWELLVILLE to be up in concluding strides. HOWELLVILLE saved ground while running with GOLDUN in early stages, took lead in stretch, but Cole appeared to ride overconfidently. GOLDUN had good speed to stretch and weakened. MARSHALL A went well placed to stretch and stopped.

CROSSING OVER, given breathing spell after pressing pace to backstretch, came up on outside of ROUGH BUDDY and, under strong handling, got up in final strides. ROUGH BUDDY, first away, opened a good lead on backstretch, but weakened under pressure in final sixteenth. SHANTEB was forwardly placed from start and tired right at end. TRUTHFULLY, started out of hand outside of gates and off poorly, went to contention boldly and hung in stretch drive. NATHAN HALE appeared sore and stopped after showing early speed.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:14. Off 5:15½. Winner, Mrs. O. Hutchinson's ch. m. MISS EPE, not hurried in early stages, came around horses to better position and, under strong hand ride, won going away. ACE OF TRUMPS was forward factor from beginning, took command in early stretch and continued gamely, but was no match for winner. HURDY GURDY was hard ridden and showed good effort. TULEYRIES LAD forced pace of TRIXIE LASS and weakened. TRIXIE LASS set pace and was shut off approaching stretch and had to be taken up sharply. The others were not prominent.

HAPPY ROAD, first away, drew out to a good lead, continued gamely when headed by GROUCHER'S BOY and was hemmed in on rail by latter. Shanks' claim of foul against GROUCHER'S BOY was not allowed. GROUCHER'S BOY, forward factor from start, drove to front between HAPPY ROAD and SEA FINN and fought it out with good energy. SEA FINN moved up sharply along backstretch, but weakened at close. LAST SCAMP was taken up repeatedly as if lugging in. ELSIE J. had early speed.

Wise Bee Scores In Bouquet Stakes

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 16 (AP). W. M. Gallagher's quick-stepping colt, Wise Bee, a 7-to-10 favorite in the field of five juveniles, easily won the forty-second Bouquet Claiming Stakes, worth $3,625 to the victorious owner here this afternoon. The chestnut son of Wise Counsellor, which failed to carry his speed all the way at Jamaica, dashed down 4½ furlongs of the Widener straightaway in 0:52 1-5, beating H. P. Headley's On Stage by two lengths. G. D. Widener's Seasonal was third, a length and a half behind.

Bankers Make Special Plea for Balanced Budget

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 16 (AP).—A ten-point program for tax revision and a balanced national budget to "restore business confidence" were recommended today by the Investment Bankers Association.

Constant rates to permit business to calculate taxes several years in advance, simplification in regulations, and discontinuance of the undistributed profits tax were included in the proposals approved by the I. B. A. board of governors.

The governors recorded a formal appeal to the Treasury Department for a balanced budget, terming the Government's finances "the most important problem in our national life."

Sens. Townsend And King Call for Balanced Budget

New York, May 16 (AP).—Amid predictions that continued Government spending beyond income might lead to national bankruptcy or currency debasement, two Senators and an economist called tonight for a balanced Governmental budget and proposed two plans to achieve it.

Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, and Dr. Neil Carothers, dean of the Lehigh University school of business administration, told the National Economy League in prepared addresses that public opinion was needed to force reduced expenditures. Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, suggested an independent legislative commission to investigate appropriations demands and to advise the Senate and House.

General Motors Makes Big Deal With Argentina

First Shipment, 4,000 Cars to Be Paid for by $2,800,000 Bonds

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, May 16.—The Argentine Foreign Exchange Control today granted to General Motors Corporation the first import permits under a new government-sponsored plan to increase shipments of automobiles from the United States in return for importers freezing dollars here by purchases of Treasury bonds.

The first authorized shipment was for approximately 4,000 cars subject to final negotiation in the United States between the Argentine Ambassador and General Motors officials. Under the plan, General Motors would buy $2,800,000 worth of Argentine bonds, while bringing into Argentina equivalent value in automobiles.

International Harvester Co. subscribed to the purchase of $500,000 worth of Argentine bonds in order to import an equal value in trucks. It was understood that other major firms, including Ford Co. and Chrysler Co. have not yet determined their action under the plan. They have until May 21 to decide.

The General Motors allotment will nearly double the total of 2,446 United States automobiles imported during the first quarter of 1939. The new plan revived commerce in U. S.-made automobiles which has been practically suspended because of Argentine government restrictions.

G. M. A. C. to Borrow $50,000,000 of Banks

New York, May 16 (AP).—It was reported today that General Motors Acceptance Corporation has arranged to borrow $50,000,000 from a group of banks for five years at 1½ per cent annual interest and will use the loan to retire $50,000,000 of 3 per cent debentures due August 1, 1946, at the call price of 102½.

The arrangement would leave G. M. A. C., the financing company owned by General Motors Corporation, with $50,000,000 of 5-year 1½ and another $50,000,000 of 15-year 3¼ due August 1, 1951, and callable at present at 103½.

Cotton Futures Rise With May At 9.25 Cents

New York, May 16 (AP).—Nearby cotton deliveries moved forward today as the May delivery expired at noon for a net gain of 22 points. The final range in other contracts was unchanged to 12 points higher.

May closed at 9.25 cents, or 88 cents above the average price of spot cotton at ten designated markets at the close Tuesday. The open interest in the spot month was liquidated in orderly fashion despite issuance of 22 delivery notices. The latter were reported stopped by Southeastern mill interests. Last-minute covering, however, forced shorts to bid up to 9.25 cents to obtain contracts.

A buying movement in July developed late in the session. Demand here was based, according to cotton analysts, on the current price of July, now some 60 cents below the cost of actual cotton. Since most brokers appeared convinced loan stocks of the staple would not be released before the season ends, the tight spot situation seems likely to continue.

Prices Lower in More Active Trading Decline Not Regarded as Significant Treasury Bonds Continue Advance

New York, May 16.—Trading in stocks increased today to roughly twice its recent daily volume, amounting to 620,540 shares. The gain in business developed with the market in a downswing. This broke the list out of the extremely narrow range that it has held for a week or more, the composite average registering a net decline of 0.91 point and the close being at the low of the day. Declines of 1 to 3 points were sustained by most of the higher priced speculative leaders. Government bonds, on the other hand, were strong and many of them reached new highs. Corporate bonds were inclined to follow stocks while among the commodities there was strength in May cotton, and softness in wheat.

The decline in stocks was not regarded in Wall Street as reflecting any turn for the worse in financial affairs. Foreign news continues to indicate a lessening of tension and while domestic business news is disappointing, it has been at its present low ebb for weeks. It s not a new thought that nothing can be expected from the Administration in the form of appeasement for business nor is it surprising that the President is balking at the adoption of a tax program which would remove some of the deterrents to business.

Indeed there was a distinct ray of hope in the information that Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, had notified the Chief Executive that the Senate proposes to write its own revisions into the next tax bill. Lower tax rates frequently mean larger revenues and in the present case it is fortunate that a large group of the legislators in the President's own party see the wisdom of relaxing those taxes which are holding back business.

Economic Conference

The problem is closely related to those matters which are coming before the temporary national economic committee, according to Peter R. Nehemkis, jr., special counsel to the SEC's investment banking section, had for its purpose the discovery of "why it is that we continue to have in this country idle men, idle machines and idle money."

Now there's a full day's work for anyone, even the capable counsel of the SEC, and it is respectfully suggested that a major start could be made by the committee if it would throw out the theories of taxation which have been in vogue since the New Deal came into office and realized that taxation primarily should be designed to raise revenue, not force alleged reforms. The men, machines and money are idle in large measure because human nature is one of the few things which has resisted New Deal changes and risks still will not be taken by investors when possible benefits will accrue mostly to the tax collector.

Motors, steels and rails were the softest spots in today's trading and all groups were dominated by minus signs. United States Rubber was the most active and sold off 2½, followed by Chrysler, down nearly 3. Motors lost 1½, Bethlehem 2¼, United States Steel 1⅝ and Republic a small fraction.

Telephone, the directors of which meet for dividend action tomorrow, followed the course of the balance of the market although it is assumed the directors will maintain the $9 rate which they were able to keep up throughout the depression.

U. S. Bonds Feature Market

United States Treasury issues supplied the best feature of listed trading in bonds today with a general advance which carried many of the most active issues to new highs for the year. With the upward move there also was a moderate increase in volume of dealings.

Outside the Treasury group domestic issues were generally easier, the averages showing fractional declines in all except public utilities. Volume was larger than in the preceding session. Second grade rails were among the heaviest losers with losses running up to 2 points or more.

Changes were narrow in leading industrial obligations with the list as a whole slightly easier. Public utilities were steady around prevous levels, the average for five issues displaying a gain of 0.08 points.

Interest in foreign bonds lagged somewhat compared with the previous day. Many of the most active issues advanced, a good feature being a rise of 4¾ points in Greek 7s of '64, to a new high for the year. Argentine 4s of 1972 also set new highs.

Wheat Prices Yield to Rain In Grain Belt

Drops Average a Cent More Rain Predicted Corn Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 16.—Rains in Texas and official and private forecasts predicting further moisture relief over much of the grain belt caused selling that lowered wheat prices more than a cent a bushel today.

The market was weak throughout the session, although there were frequent small rallies after the low of 73⅜ cents for July and September contracts, representing the 1939 crop, was reached. May wheat fell as much as 1⅝ cents to 76¾ before rallying. All contracts closed ⅞ to 1⅜ lower than yesterday, with July and September at 73½@73⅝.

A long-range weather forecast credited to a California meteorologist suggested the prospect of frequent rains in dry districts of the Southwest the rest of this month and the weather map showed thundershowers were developing over Texas. Later, the official forecast predicted scattered rains or unsettled weather with lower temperatures over much of the winter and spring wheat belts. Light rains were reported in North Dakota.

Other grains followed the downturn in wheat, corn closing ½ to ¾ lower; July, 51⅛; September, 51¾; oats, ⅝ to 1⅜ off; rye, ½ to ⅞ down, and lard 7 to 10 lower.

New York, May 16 (AP).—Samuel W. Reyburn, chairman of the board of the Associated Dry Goods Corporation, believes department stores benefit more advertising in newspapers and magazines than by use of other mediums. In an address prepared for delivery tonight at a banquet honoring him on completion of chain, he said department store advertising would continue to go to newspapers because of "greater visibility and longer life." Department stores, he said, are giving constantly greater care to assuring truthful statements in their advertising.

Trade Pacts Vital To Recovery, Hull Declares

By the United Press.

Secretary of State Hull last night lauded the New Deal's reciprocal trade agreement program as vital to all segments of industrial recovery, and accused its critics of attempting to promote a general belief that "business is being taken away from Americans and handed over to foreigners."

He voiced his sentiments in a letter replying to advertisements published by Millard D. Brown, president of Continental Mills, Inc., Philadelphia.

"In the agreement with the United Kingdom alone," Hull said, "we obtained specific concessions on American products, exports of which to the United Kingdom, Newfoundland and British colonies in 1936 amounted to $875,000,000."

N. American Ousts Heads of St. Louis Unit

Action Follows Rumor That Officers Had Made Political Gifts

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 16.—A drastic shakeup in the management of Union Electric Co. of Missouri was announced today by J. F. Fogarty, president of North American Co., which controls the Union company.

It involves the withdrawal from operations of the Union company of Louis H. Egan, president; Frank J. Boehm, executive vice president, and A. C. Laun, vice president, all of St. Louis. The Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Capital Transit Co. are units of the North American system.

Changes in the management were an outgrowth of an investigation of Union Electric Co. started April 5 by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which were to sift charges the company had violated the SEC act. A statement issued by Fogarty said:

"At a joint conference in New York among executive officers of the North American Co. and of the Union Electric Co. of Missouri, it was determined that in the interests of the stockholders of both companies certain officers of the Union company should withdraw from their direction of the operations of that company.

"When rumors were first circulated that the Union company had made contributions of a political nature, the president of that company announced that he had requested the Securities and Exchange Commission to investigate such rumors.

"The commission initiated a private investigation, which is continuing. This conclusion reflects the determination on the part of officers of both companies to see to it that neither company shall be embarrassed in facilitating proper inquiry into the facts."

Contract Bridge

By R. F. Foster.

Mr. Foster, dean of card authorities, is a guest columnist for Florence Osborn, who is on a short vacation.

The bane of modern bridge is ambiguity. If there are, as alleged, 17,000,000 bridge players in the United States, 98 per cent of them are card pushers, leaving 240,000 master players to study out the many ambiguities of their bidding systems, and their artificial conventions, which I call "articons," for short.

The forerunner of all this ambiguity was Maj. Patton's double of an orignial one no-trump bid, instead of second hand's calling two no-trump when he also held a no-trumper. This forced partner to call something if he could not defeat the no-trumper but neither the doubler nor the partner had any definite idea of what the other had.

Every time such hands are played with a trump suit, analysis shows that in 28 per cent of such cases the adversaries can use to their advantage the trump suit erroneously selected by the declarer, with the result of cutting down his possible gain, or defeating his contract and scoring penalities.

No-trumpers are bid on suit distribution; no singleton, and only one doubleton, if any: 4 4 3 2, 5 3 3 2, 4 3 3 3.

Assuming average value of each suit to be 10; A, 4; K, 3; Q, 2; J, 1; total for the pack is 40. Stopped suits are: K x, Q xx, 10 xxx. (X stands for any low card.)

With no-trump distribution 2½ quick tricks, 3 suits stopped, and 4 above average value (14 count) bid one no-trump. Two bids demand 4 suits stopped.

First caller bids full value at once, unless partner has passed; then shades bid one trick.

Partner responds with full value at once; but failing no-trump suit distribution, he should bid any five-card suit as a denial.

First Caller	Partner's Responses
With 14, bid 1	With 9, bid 2.
(Even with only 3 suits stopped).	With 12, bid 3.
	With 21, bid 6.
With 18, bid 2	With 6, bid 3.
(4 suits stopped)	With 12 bid 6.
With 22, bid 3	With 9, bid 6.
(4 suits stopped)	With 12, bid 7.

As an example of the difference between this simple system for simple players and the way Ely Culbertson and Theodore A. Lightner bid a hand in the international match for the championship of the world, take today's hand. The Lightner-Culbertson bidding is shown in the box; they went down three tricks, vulnerable.

This is the calling I would recommend on this hand:

South	West	North	East
1 Club	Pass	2 Diamonds	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

With seven declared quick tricks between the two hands, and no suit agreed on as trumps, all the bidding must be made on quick tricks; so South goes at once to three no-trump.

Without an agreed trump suit, and each partner showing weakness in his partner's suit, any slam is difficult. Even six diamonds is troublesome with a spade lead. To make five no-trump is easy, without any possibility of ambiguity in the calling.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

REMEMBER, only a day is left in which reservations can be made for the trip to New York on the special train with "Miss Beauty and Brains," winner in the recent Post-A.F.G.E. Contest. This special train, which will carry Miss Mabel Sugnet, the winner; Mrs. Mabel Meeker, the runner-up, and Miss Charlotte Whittington, the alternate, will leave here at 1:30 p. m. Friday.

In New York, the three Government girls will be guests of honor at the World's Fair, which will observe Government Employe's Day on Saturday; will see Broadway shows, be guests of honor at the Paradise Cafe and will participate in an interesting program of entertainment arranged in their honor.

But little has been written to date of the alternate, Miss Whittington, who is a lovely brunette girl. She is employed in the Federal Alcohol Administration, in the Washington Loan & Trust Co. Building. She is the youngest of the group who will be taken by the A.F.G.E. to the fair.

Meanwhile, many reservations are being made for the trip at the A. F. G. E. Tour Headquarters, 1422 F street northwest.

A. J. TEL MEURER, chief of the graphic section, United States Tariff Commission, exhibited his paintings of Washington shrines at 8:30 o'clock last night in the Bamboo Room of the Willard Hotel. Meurer, for some years, has concentrated on historic subjects, especially those concerned with George Washington. He studied art at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Corcoran School of Art and elsewhere. The exhibition was opened with a lecture by Meurer, and introductory remarks by A. Manuel Fox, member of the Tariff Commission.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't reckon there's anythin' in this wide world as downright toothsome and pleasin' to the palate as the food your mother used to make. Sometimes I just sit here and sorta let my mind go back to them delicious hot biscuits, brown gravy, fried goslins an' hominy . . . and my mouth starts to waterin' like a busted fire hydrant.

But honest, it's sure changed a lot since I was a boy. Last night I was ridin' home on the streetcar, and I heard one big business woman say to another, "I must hurry home to dinner, or I'd have worked later at the office. There's nothing like a good home-cooked dinner, is there?"

The second lady said, "No, but I'm beginning to suspect my husband of spending his afternoons at the movies. I'm positive that pudding last night came from the delicatessen!"

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

"I didn't know that eyelashes grew as long as yours, Nadeja," said Duncan, as he looked at the mysterious woman.

SYNOPSIS.

Aunt Nehalie, Peg's maiden aunt.

Duncan Patterson, United States Army lieutenant, Peg's brother.

Count Paul Stranyan, foreign embassy attache.

Peg, Anthony and Duncan are at an Embassy reception, enjoying the gayeties when Count Paul Stranyan demands an introduction. While dancing with him, Peg sees Hewitt enter with beautiful Thalia Polk. Hewitt had told Peg he was to be away on business. Then, Anthony's sister, Joan, crashes the party and meets Peg. Finally Peg and Hewitt meet and he offers explanations which she accepts. Meanwhile, Peg has promised to go to a night club with the Count the following Friday. Mme. Nadeja Damara enters the ballroom, while Duncan watches her longingly.

CHAPTER X.

He had found her at an Embassy garden party in the spring. He had looked beneath a wide-brimmed hat into Nadeja Damara's shadowy eyes, had felt himself sinking slowly into their violet, fathomless depths. They had exchanged scarcely six words that afternoon, but he had known as surely as he knew his own name that he would see her again and again and again. It was as strange as that.

He had found out later that being in love was not the happiest time in a man's life; that books and poems and songs were dead wrong about it. Most of the time now his head throbbed, his eyes ached and every nerve and muscle in his body clamored for a moment's rest; every instinct of his heart and senses turned a dozen times a day toward the telephone—"just pick up the receiver and call her number and you can hear her voice . . . "

Tonight he had stood there in the stag line, in the gay spirit of the reception, but not a real part of it. He had relived in a series of pictures the day he met Nadeja and the breathless, maddening days that had followed their meeting.

Life of Tinsel

The picture he liked the most was Nadeja in his own small bungalow in Chevy Chase. Nadeja in his arms. Her soft bare shoulders under his hands, her slim, warm bodoy pressed close and for a moment her lips under his. Urging him on with those shadowy eyes; yet holding him off, driving him a little mad, with soft hands that pressed firmly against the white bosom of his shirt, with a gaze that said plainly enough, "No, Duncan—no."

Nadja getting up from the sofa and following him into the tiny kitchen and helping him squeeze oranges for a cocktail. When she stood beside him the top of her golden head came just level with his shoulder. Her fingers, pressed against the oranges, were slim and white and the big gold ring with the serpent coiled over a green stone, which she sometimes wore, would catch the facets of the ceiling light. He had said once, looking at her, his heart crowding his chest: "I didn't know that eyelashes grew as long as yours, Nadeja. They're positively disconcerting."

"So I've been told."

"I have. And I've ben told that it might be dangerous to drink cocktails in a suburban bungalow with a handsome young man . . . "

He had wanted to know everything about her; had hungered for all the details of her life which he had not been able to share with her. How did she look when she was a tiny girl? What did she do? Had she been happy always. She became a little remote when he questioned her. And not until she was gone and he lay awake at night, unable to sleep, did he realize how she evaded talking of herself.

Nor did she seem to have any probing curiosity about him. She did not even ask him why he kept bachelor quarters out in Chevy Chase when he could just as easily have lived with Aunt Mehalie and his sisters. In a way, he suspected she knew the answer to that; his real reason for living alone. He was deathly tired of being with Nadeja in crowds, of going to places where they wouldn't be seen, places where he could not take her in his arms.

Danger

For she would not let him come to her hotel suite; not even when Emmanuel was out of the city, which was often. Emmanuel was always off somewhere: New York, Europe, South America. "It would look bad, darling," Nadeja had explained. "Doormen and bellboys and elevator boys talk so. It would be dangerous for me to be talked about . . . danger for you, too."

He had understood her real meaning. For he knew that Emmanuel Damara was still madly in love with his wife, insanely jealous. He knew, too, that Nadeja only tolerated him. "What little I felt for him left long ago, Duncan. It is dead—quite dead. After all, our marriage was a European one, arranged and settled for us long before we grew up." And yet she was strangely withdrawn when he urged a divorce.

"But money, darling . . . we'd have to live, you know. And an American lieutenant doesn't make such a great amount, does he?"

After that he had begun to think with a feverish persistency of his inventive mind as a possible means to wealth. A woman like Nadeja deserved a gold and white drawing room as a background for her beauty; she deserved sables and diamonds and fine satins to accent the soft supple curves of her body. He had no right to offer her what little he could, to take her away from all that Emmanuel could do for her. "I could get out of the service . . . " he would think, desperately. And at that his head would throb more painfully.

Illinois Jury To Reopen Oil Trust Charges

Major Companies to Be Quizzed on Practices 'Not Wholly Abandoned'

By the United Press.

A Federal grand jury at Danville, Ill., will investigate whether major oil companies in ten mid-Western States are violating anti-trust laws, the Justice Department announced last night.

"There is reason to believe," said Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, "that the price levels for gasoline in this area have continued to a large extent to be artificially maintained and that many of the terms under which gasoline jobbers are permitted to do business with the major oil companies remain rigid and restricted."

Practices Not Abandoned

Arnold said the Danville investigation beginning June 5, would expand evidence about the companies obtained by grand juries sitting at Madison, Wis. After being indicted at Madison, 14 corporations and 11 individuals pleaded nolo contendre and paid fines and costs totaling $490,000.

Arnold said evidence indicates conditions which precipitated the indictments have not been "wholly abandoned" in the oil industry.

Numerous subpenas have been issued, Arnold said. Among those subpenaed were individuals and representatives of corporations which pleaded nolo condendre to the Madison indictments. Arnold pointed out they had not testified in that investigation.

To Testify With Immunity

"For the Madison grand jury to have summoned these persons to throw light upon the investigation it was then conducting would have resulted in providing them with immunity from prosecution," Arnold said.

"Many of them indicated that they would claim their lawful privileges against self-incrimination and would furnish information in their possession only in return for immunity, which the Government, in view of the circumstances and the apparent gravity of the offenses, did not then feel free to grant.

"Now, since these persons have entered pleas and paid fines and may not under the law be prosecuted again for the same transactions, the grand jury at Danville is in the position to compel them to disclose all the facts within their knowledge relating to these questions. They can now safely be accorded immunity from any further prosecution based on such disclosures as they may now make."
